I agree with your comments. The VA staff has limited knowledge and experience, which is why you and the Centers are so important to help the VA move forward.

Looking forward to the discussion today.

Before you consider the phrase you do not believe it is appropriate to do due diligence. We now have approximately 20 in our group that already have an available platform to solve the two issues you believe can not be solved. Also Apple technology is more than apps, platforms that get the job done are equally important.

For the Thursday call, here are the VA thoughts in blue based on the agenda items you had sent me. If I get additional questions I will send them:

1. The Veterans will need an app that provides for the appropriate medical facility and or physician that is geotagged to their location. It should list the closest certified cardiac center, stroke center, trauma center and pediatric center. It should also list qualified urgent care centers.
 - a. We suggest a modified use case: A telehealth provider wants to direct their patient to a nearby healthcare resource (e.g. urgent care center or call 911 for patient). The app should be able to send to the patient and the patient's telehealth providers, the location of the patient and the healthcare resources that are nearby to the patient. For example, the closest VA location, closest pharmacy, closest urgent care center, and closest contact center phone number.
2. We will need the ability for Veterans to download the records from both the Veteran sector (Veterans have access to a portable record) and private sector on their portable device. It should have the feature that would prevent duplication of tests at the time of ordering at the point of contact and the ability to send information back to their primary doctor in real time. It should also have a feature to prevent unnecessary testing and over utilization.
 - a. This is the FHIR Patient-Mediated data exchange concept. Please see attached FHIR concept paper.
3. We need a technology solution for tracking medication compliance, prevention of over utilization of controlled substances and prevention of medication errors.
 - a. This is a problem but we do not believe that this is something that can be solved with an app.
4. Currently the medical discharge everywhere is antiquated. Patients are discharged by a floor nurse with a list of medication. We need a system that automatically checks that the patient picked up the medication and does not confuse it with medication at home. Second, track follow up appointments, health care services for home care and distributes all information to the health care team.

Subject: [EXTERNAL] Apple Agenda

The following is the correct agenda I accidentally sent an earlier version

The Veterans will need an app that provides for the appropriate medical facility and or physician that is geotagged to their location. It should list the closest certified cardiac center, stroke center, trauma center and pediatric center. It should also list qualified urgent care centers.

We will need the ability for Veterans to download the records from both the Veteran sector (Veterans have access to a portable record) and private sector on their portable device. It should have the feature that would prevent duplication of tests at the time of ordering at the point of contact and the ability to send information back to their primary doctor in real time. It should also have a feature to prevent unnecessary testing and over utilization.

We need a technology solution for tracking medication compliance, prevention of over utilization of controlled substances and prevention of medication errors.

Currently the medical discharge everywhere is antiquated. Patients are discharged by a floor nurse with a list of medication. We need a system that automatically checks that the patient picked up the medication and does not confuse it with medication at home. Second, track follow up appointments, health care services for home care and distributes all information to the health care team.

Subject: Congresswoman - Elise Stefanik

<https://stefanik.house.gov/>

Biography

Congresswoman Elise Stefanik proudly represents New York's 21st District in the House of Representatives in her second term in office. She is a Member of the Armed Services Committee, the Committee on Education and the Workforce, and the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. On the Armed Services Committee, Congresswoman Stefanik serves as Chair for the Subcommittee on Emerging Threats and Capabilities and is a Member of the Subcommittee on Readiness. On the Committee on Education and the Workforce, she serves on the Subcommittees on Higher Education and Workforce Development and Workforce Protections. Additionally, she serves as Chair of the House Republican Policy Committee's Millennial Task Force.

Congresswoman Stefanik is proudly the youngest woman ever elected to Congress in United States history.

Among Congresswoman Stefanik's accomplishments and initiatives, she:

- Successfully led the New York State delegation in saving Fort Drum from up to 16,000 military personnel cuts due to sequestration.
- Authored the Be Open Act – legislation that passed the House of Representatives and was signed into law by the President. This was the largest fix to Obamacare of the 114th Congress and repealed the auto-enrollment mandate that reduces choices in health coverage and has created confusion that can lead to significant tax penalties on both the employer and employee.
- Authored the Flexible Pell Grant for 21st Century Students Act -- bipartisan legislation developed from her higher education roundtables that will help students complete a postsecondary education quickly and at a lower cost.
- Helped pass the Bipartisan Budget Act – a two year budget agreement that lifted the devastating defense sequester cuts and put an end to crisis-to-crisis governing.
- Was the sole freshman negotiator for two consecutive years on the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) and fought hard to include language to help protect and strengthen Fort Drum.
- Co-authored U.S./Canadian pre-clearance legislation that passed the House of Representatives in 2016 and will help grow North Country commerce, tourism and border security.
- Brought a new commitment to transparency to Congress, posting her legislative votes to Facebook and keeping her website updated with her legislative work and public schedule.
- Has worked hard on behalf of North Country veterans, helping to recover hard earned benefits from the VA and helping pass critical legislation to support our North Country heroes, including the Clay Hunt Suicide Prevention for American Veterans Act.
- Helped pass the 21st Century Cures Act -- critical, bipartisan legislation designed to help accelerate the discovery, development, and delivery of promising new treatments and cures for patients with diseases ranging from Alzheimer's to Lyme.

Prior to winning her election to Congress, Congresswoman Stefanik worked at her family's small business called Premium Plywood Products that was founded in Upstate New York over twenty years ago. Growing up in her family's small business, she learned, lived and understands the values of hard work, perseverance, challenges, and risk that go along with building, operating and growing small businesses that provide jobs in today's Upstate economy.

Congresswoman Stefanik's policy focus includes:

- Creating jobs and economic opportunities for small businesses and hard working families in Upstate New York.
- Reducing the out-of-control tax and regulatory burdens facing small businesses by reforming the tax code to be flatter and fairer and eliminating red tape.
- Repealing Obamacare and replacing it with common sense solutions to lower health care costs and improve quality and access.
- Fighting for fiscal responsibility by balancing the budget and protecting and preserving entitlements.
- Expanding access to broadband throughout the district.
- Supporting Upstate farmers – the backbone of our North Country communities.
- Protecting Fort Drum and advocating for veterans and military families.
- Pursuing energy policies that help North Country families and businesses.
- Finding solutions for hard working North Country families to help make education higher quality and more affordable.
- Promoting and strengthening U.S.-Canadian trade relations.

Congresswoman Stefanik served as Director of Vice Presidential Debate Prep to Paul Ryan where she oversaw all debate preparations for the Republican Vice Presidential nominee. She served as Director of Communications for the Foreign Policy Initiative, which launched Defending Defense, a coalition of think tanks warning of the dangers of the sequester.

From 2006 - 2009, Congresswoman Stefanik served in the West Wing of the White House as part of President George W. Bush's Domestic Policy Council Staff and in the Chief of Staff's office where she assisted in overseeing the policy development process on all economic and domestic policy issues.

As the first member of her immediate family to graduate from college, Congresswoman Stefanik graduated with Honors from Harvard University. She currently serves on the Senior Advisory Committee of Harvard's Institute of Politics, the largest political undergraduate organization.

Congresswoman Stefanik was born and raised in Upstate New York. She graduated cum laude from Albany Academy for Girls, the oldest continuous all girls' school in the country. She lives in Willsboro, NY where her family has had a home since she was 3.

Subject: Your Video and An Introduction to Dr. (b) (6)

Dear David,

First, I want to say again that the video from The National Disabled Veteran's Winter Sports Clinic in Snowmass, Colorado last week was awesome! I can only imagine how you felt being there. Talk about people rising to a challenge!

I had no idea that it is the largest adaptive event of its kind in the world and I am looking forward to hearing more when we see you on the 24th!

I am writing to you today in order to connect you with Dr. (b) (6)

I had the good fortune and pleasure of meeting him in Costa Rica in February and saw him again at a conference in Western Mass. this past weekend. He is currently director of the Cleveland Clinic's Center for Functional Medicine, chairman of the Institute for Functional Medicine and has dedicated his life and career to identifying and addressing the root causes of chronic illness and degenerative disease.

In addition to decades of clinical practice, he continues to pour his energy into writing, research, teaching and public policy work. It is hard not to appreciate his seemingly tireless advocacy when it comes to empowering people around their health issues. I know mom is feeling a bit more energized following some of his suggestions.

Like you, he has testified before Senate committees and, besides that commonality, I think you two have much in common and would enjoy meeting one another and could be helpful to one another in areas of overlapping interest! As you can see, I copied him on this email and I am trusting that you and (b) (6) will find a way to follow-up with one another.

You both have my deepest respect for what you are accomplishing in the world and the many lives you have touched!

Looking forward to seeing you soon!

Thanks (b) (6) for the introduction.

Hello David.

I would love the chance to touch base with you about some of the innovative cancer research we are doing at Cleveland Clinic. I will be in DC the 18th and would love the chance to chat even for a few minutes.

Let me know if we can make that happen. I am meeting with the Surgeon General at 10 am.

My cell is 413 446 (b) (6)

Be well,

Subject: Your Video and An Introduction to Dr. (b) (6)

Dear David,

First, I want to say again that the video from The National Disabled Veteran's Winter Sports Clinic in Snowmass, Colorado last week was awesome! I can only imagine how you felt being there. Talk about people rising to a challenge! I had no idea that it is the largest adaptive event of its kind in the world and I am looking forward to hearing more when we see you on the 24th!

I am writing to you today in order to connect you with Dr. (b) (6)

I had the good fortune and pleasure of meeting him in Costa Rica in February and saw him again at a conference in Western Mass. this past weekend. He is currently director of the Cleveland Clinic's Center for Functional Medicine, chairman of the Institute for Functional Medicine and has dedicated his life and career to identifying and addressing the root causes of chronic illness and degenerative disease.

In addition to decades of clinical practice, he continues to pour his energy into writing, research, teaching and public policy work. It is hard not to appreciate his seemingly tireless advocacy when it comes to empowering people around their health issues. I know mom is feeling a bit more energized following some of his suggestions.

Like you, he has testified before Senate committees and, besides that commonality, I think you two have much in common and would enjoy meeting one another and could be helpful to one another in areas of overlapping interest! As you can see, I copied him on this email and I am trusting that you and (b) (6) will find a way to follow-up with one another.

You both have my deepest respect for what you are accomplishing in the world and the many lives you have touched!

Looking forward to seeing you soon!

Not sure if you saw my message, if you want to start asap, then the group can be invited as part of smag under an innovation subcommittee. If you want it to be part of myva we learned we have to wait until the group has enough members to hose a quorum. Either faca, would have a member recommend the subcommittee and will send letters to invite them.

The jump start would be to have it under smag, not sure how long before myva will be up.

We can letters drafted, leaving some parts blank.

So sweet for your husband and you to host a dinner in my husband's honor. Sorry the schedule is crazy so has taken me a while to get some dates.

How does Friday june 2 or june 23 or june 27 look?

Do any of those work with your schedules?

If not we can keep trying.

Thanks.

Sir.....see email below from CBS Veterans News VP.....Both Chairman Isakson and Ranking Member Tester were interviewed last week and will be part of the role out....I strongly. As they were developing this program a few months ago, I strongly recommended that they be sure to connect with VA and afford the Secretary an opportunity to be interviewed as part of the rollout....they agreed....there appears to be a snag in the VA chain to you....unless you have declined. You are a natural in these settings....I wanted to be sure that you were aware and that this opportunity would not be inadvertently missed....thanks....

Good Afternoon Tom:

We have struggled to establish contact with the VA. When the administration changed over, I was referred to (b) (6) and we engaged in some positive conversations, but he appears to be gone. We have been very successful interviewing many key officials in the Veteran world as we prepare for our launch on June 5th. As of now, we have no one from the VA. I know they will support our efforts, but I don't want to leave them out...do you have any suggestions? Always appreciate the help, Mark OBrien

Hi Dave,

Watching you on Fox & Friends this morning. We had exchanged a few emails & texts (708.837-[(b) (6)]) about the notion of being added to the senior group, to help accelerate the improvements being pursued & use my unique "blended" Ascension Health/HCA pedigree to be a link & conduit to forging partnerships with the private provider sector.

I was referred to some Indian undersecretary, for follow-up. We had a conversation & was told that she would be back in touch. Sadly, the govt. inertia/group of insecure/incompetent career people kept out those who've had a track record in the private sector, e.g., 4 large hospital turnarounds, as well as industry credibility, i.e., selected by editors of HealthLeaders Journal, to serve as 1 of 2 judges, selecting the Top Leadership Teams in Healthcare (e.g., Novant Health, Banner Health).

I hope that you & team can continue to make progress. It's made more difficult though when ineffective members are keeping good people out, who've reached out to offer help.

Hi David,

Many thanks again for your 2+ recent notes of interest, these past few days.

I caught most of your interview on Fox, this morning. As you assemble your exec team to transform the VA health system, my "blended" Ascension/HCA pedigree would reinforce and buttress your vision and the plan that requires history and success in the "real" healthcare leadership world.

Wishing continued success, David.

Hi David,

Many thanks for your text message this morning, received @ 5:24 Chicago time...was up. You asked me to share my resume, which I've attached. Also is a 1 pg. summary for reference.

My LI message, yesterday, is my reference point, i.e., reaching out to Anthony Scaramucci, etc.

Your text this morning asked if I was interested in "full or part-time, as well as DC or somewhere else".I have a colleague who served as an Undersecretary of the VA, leading all hospitals, which was a couple years ago.

While regional oversight and leadership could be an option, I would be effective, also, in assisting/formulating/distributing & ensuring that the "rules of engagement" that are desired and deserved are put in place.

I had previously served on the Board of Governors, for the Federation of American Hospitals (the investor-owned version of the American Hospital Assoc.). My unique Ascension Health/HCA pedigree also affords a "street cred and familiarity" with all health systems, recognized, like you, as a trusted peer and not a bureaucrat.

After gaining my investor-owned experience, I became valued, again, by the non-profit systems (Mercy Health, St Louis & Franciscan Alliance), for the mgmt discipline alluded to.

I can effectively assist with your message, both under the guise of Mission and being an exceptional community steward. From my HCA and other investor-owned chapter, I am also particularly comfortable and effective, operating in an accountable business environment, having learned the "management discipline", i.e., performance to budget and accountability to shareholders (tax-payers, for VA).

My personal characteristics/assets include having started my career as a hospital housekeeper. Both sisters are RN's. My Father was a med-device career marketing executive. He taught me that being a physician is a vocation. My career recipe became: Attract platinum-level physicians to my organization, find out what these physicians desire to be successful. Enable their success, which begets my hospitals' success. I had a repeatable interest/aptitude to achieve in every opportunity that was given to lead. To my Father's credit, my oldest child recently became a new Family Practitioner.

My Dad became afflicted with Alzheimer's (since passed). I chose to create time to help my parents, and worked to leverage my experience and network, to help my provider peers via the client service side.

With my "bottom of the ladder" career history, I effectively relate to, and deal with all strata of the organization. My broad background was recognized by the editors of HealthLeaders Journal, selected to be 1 of 2 judges, to evaluate and select their annual Top Leadership Teams in Healthcare (for 2 years), in the large hospital/system category.

I was fortunate to see the "greatest hits" of healthcare leadership.

I hope, David, I hope I can be helpful. A solid supporter of the current Administration! My VA DNA is limited to my Uncle, a Marine, who served in the Recon Div (precursor to Navy Seals).

Best and thanks,

Subject: connecting in advance of June 14 call

Hi Bruce,

I wanted to touch base before the call on June 14th to make sure we understand the goals and agenda and are fully prepared. I also wanted to let you know that the Apple team met with the VA this past Thursday and made good progress. The VA stated that EHRs mobility is their first priority and the discussion focused on this work and how Apple and the five medical centers can partner to realize that goal as quickly as possible. As that work moves forward, the other three work streams (physician geolocation app, medication tracking, and transitions of care) can then be folded in. The VA has already done a lot of work to make their systems compatible with the argonaut standard (an important first step), and they are pushing to complete that work in order to move forward. The Apple team will support that effort as needed. The group also identified questions for both the VA and Apple, and the teams are now working internally to be ready to meet again and take the discussions forward.

From my perspective, it makes sense to use the call on June 14th to report on this meeting and outline next steps. I'm not sure that we are at a point where this discussion needs to be overly technical or include proprietary information, but I do think it will be useful to report in to Ike and [REDACTED] about the work so far.

Please let me know if this sounds right to you.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

My suggestion for research is to request a brief strategic document from Rachael on where they are going to focus their efforts (does it align with our priorities?) and what they should be doing and not doing.

Is there a plan to get more external funding?

How will they use their budget to get more value from research or is it business as usual?

<http://thehill.com/policy/defense/335963-demoted-dc-va-head-gets-new-high-ranking-job-at-va-headquarters-report>

The demoted head of D.C.'s Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) hospital is now in a high-ranking post at the VA's headquarters, according to NBC4 in Washington.

Brian Hawkins's new role follows his April demotion, which was prompted by a government watchdog's scathing report warning that patients at the VA center in Washington, D.C., were at risk due to staffing deficiencies and inventory management. He had been in the post since 2011.

The Hill has reached out to the VA for comment regarding Hawkins's new position. The VA said in April it would take additional disciplinary actions if appropriate.

“VA’s top priority is to ensure that no patient has been harmed. If appropriate, additional disciplinary actions will be taken in accordance with the law,” the VA said in a statement at the time.

The report on Hawkins's new role comes the same day that NBC4 reported that D.C.'s Metropolitan Police Department and top officials at the Washington VA medical center are investigating after the discovery of a missing veteran’s body outside of the medical center.

The veteran was reported missing on May 15, after he didn't return home from an appointment at the VA. His body was not found until May 17.

I think to make progress we should look at preventative measures first. This will prevent the "hot button issue for the VSO". Also I think we need to understand immediately the preventive pathway for diabetes and tinnitus that are projected to go up possibly 20 billion next year. If we do not act soon we will need to ask for a budget instead of using our intellectual capital to reduce the budget.

Subject: New York Post: Mowdown mayhem in Times Square

I thought you might be interested in this story from the New York Post.

A Navy washout on a suicide mission plowed his car through three blocks of sidewalk pedestrian traffic in Times Square on Thursday — killing a teenage tourist and injuring 22 others.

“You were supposed to shoot me! I wanted to kill them,” Richard Rojas, 26, told police after his bloody rampage, according to sources.

The killer, who has been arrested twice for drunken driving, was heading south on Seventh Avenue at 11:55 a.m. when he pulled a sudden U-turn at West 42nd Street, then barreled north — the wrong way — sending victims flying and witnesses running for their lives.

Rojas, of The Bronx, finally crashed his Honda Accord into a stanchion at Broadway and 45th Street — then got out of the car and ran toward a group of people with his arms outstretched before being tackled by law enforcement, including a transit cop and an FBI agent.

“He was driving like a madman and screaming,” eyewitness Michael Rickerby, 24, a tourist from Tennessee told The Post. “It looked like he was trying to hit people. He had the angriest, craziest face, and he was literally going after people.”

Witnesses watched in horror as Rojas’ car raced up the sidewalk, killing Michigan tourist Alyssa Elzman, 18, who was standing near her 13-year-old sister, between 42nd and 43rd streets.

The incident sparked fears of terrorism, but officials said they have no reason to believe that played a role in the carnage.

“Based on the information we have at this moment, there is no indication that this was an act of terror,” Mayor de Blasio said.

Of the 22 injured, four were rushed to hospitals in serious condition, with open fractures and “multiple traumas,” officials said.

“None of those four are likely to perish. We’re very hopeful. . . that they will survive,” said FDNY Commissioner Daniel Nigro.

Rojas was taken to the Midtown South Precinct station house, where he told police that he had hoped to commit suicide-by-cop, sources said. He wasn’t drunk, but police suspect that he may have been using drugs, for which he was undergoing testing Thursday afternoon, sources said.

Rojas was arrested for drunken driving in 2008 and again in 2015. Most recently, he was busted on May 11 for threatening a man who had come to his home to get an annuity notarized.

“You’re trying to steal my identity,” he told the man as he held up a knife to his throat, according to court papers.

In that incident, he was charged with menacing and criminal possession of a weapon but pleaded guilty to harassment.

Rojas served in the Navy as an electrician’s mate fireman apprentice from 2011 to 2014 and was dishonorably discharged, sources said.

He was arrested in 2012 at a naval base in Jacksonville, Fla., for allegedly attacking a cabdriver and threatening to kill cops, according to court records obtained by Reuters.

“My life is over,” he shouted at the cabby before his bust. Rojas was charged with misdemeanor battery and resisting an officer without violence.

In 2013, he also spent a couple months behind bars in a military prison in Charleston, SC, but it’s unclear why he was locked up. A pal said he was never the same after his stint in the military and took to drinking to relieve his stress.

“He finally came home, and it was hard for him to find a job,” said Harrison Ramos, 30. “He was having a lot of bad nightmares. He was talking crazy. He was acting strange.”

Rojas would rant about “demons and devils” and became wrapped up in conspiracy theories — a far cry from his behavior before his military service, Ramos said.

“He started drinking to help with his problems. He didn’t drink before,” the friend said. “I saw him about a week ago, and I asked him how’s he doing, and he sounded lost in the world, like he wasn’t with all his five senses.”

But on Wednesday night, Rojas appeared to be in “good spirits” as he celebrated getting his impounded car back, another friend said.

“He just got his car back, a Honda,” said José Medrano, 27. “He was happy about it. He said they had taken his car for lack of payment. He’d just gotten it back and was happy. He was drinking last night out here, with his friends.”

The next day, Rojas used the Honda for his deadly spree.

Witnesses recalled victims being lifted off the ground by his car, as mortified pedestrians ran for shelter.

“I see this woman was mid-air and this guy is revving his engine and just going full-speed,” said deliveryman Julio Sanchez River, 20.

“He was on the curb between 42nd and 43rd. It was a pretty scary sight. It was really gruesome. There were clothes and shoes everywhere.”

Rojas resisted until the end, punching a police officer while struggling to get away, witnesses said.

Civilians also sprung into action to help capture him, including Alphe Balde, 57, who works in Times Square for Gray Line Tours.

“I grabbed him by the neck,” he said. “I said, ‘You’re not getting away.’”

I was asked by Ike to lead the call and I want to present a short list of needed technology in a first phase. Please review and change or add to it as needed. Thank you

We will need the full expertise of the company to develop the following:

The Veterans will need an app that provides for the appropriate medical facility and or physician that is geotagged to their location.

We will need the ability for Veterans to download the records from both the Veteran sector and private sector on their smartphone.

We will need to work together in developing health related apps that can be used by the VA and those in active service. We have a good group between the five medical centers, researchers affiliated with the VA and the brilliant group at Apple to provide the R&D.

We need a technology solution for tracking medication compliance, prevention of over utilization of controlled substances and prevention of medication errors.

Finally, there will need to be a more efficient and comprehensive platform in telemedicine especially for mental health services.

I need more info from someone at VA on how these rules work before my Hill meetings. Also, David, i am thinking that a meeting for me (or you) with Senator Tester on the subject would also love the ball. I can explain why tomorrow. Let me know your thoughts when we talk.

Roughly 5-6 hours, one connecting flight in Detroit, Denver, LAX or Houston. Or fly straight to Lax no connection (3.5hrs) and drive 2 hours to San Diego.

Certainly doable, but would be a lot.

Would you be able to speak with former Congressman Jim Greenwood, now President and CEO of the Biotechnology Innovation Organization (BIO), regarding the invitation? I am happy to send the formal invitation to you for review prior to speaking with Jim if that would be helpful. Or I can just have Jim forward you the invitation via email. Whatever works best for you.

Roughly 5-6 hours, one connecting flight in Detroit, Denver, LAX or Houston. Or fly straight to Lax no connection (3.5hrs) and drive 2 hours to San Diego.

Certainly doable, but would be a lot.

Dr. Shulkin,

Have you had chance to review the summer calendar schedule? This is the bioscience engagement in San Diego, I'll speak to them on Monday and say we have not confirmed yet.

Hi Ms. (b) (6) –

Would you be able to speak with former Congressman Jim Greenwood, now President and CEO of the Biotechnology Innovation Organization (BIO), regarding the invitation? I am happy to send the formal invitation to you for review prior to speaking with Jim if that would be helpful. Or I can just have Jim forward you the invitation via email. Whatever works best for you.

Thanks so much for reaching out. Greatly appreciated!

see email below from CBS Veterans News VP.....Both Chairman Isakson and Ranking Member Tester were interviewed last week and will be part of the role out....I strongly. As they were developing this program a few months ago, I strongly recommended that they be sure to connect with VA and afford the Secretary an opportunity to be interviewed as part of the rollout....they agreed....there appears to be a snag in the VA chain to you....unless you have declined. You are a natural in these settings....I wanted to be sure that you were aware and that this opportunity would not be inadvertently missed.....thanks....

We have been very successful interviewing many key officials in the Veteran world as we prepare for our launch on June 5th. As of now, we have no one from the VA. Hello Dr. Alaigh,

I hope you are doing well!

As I mentioned when we talked last, Dr. [(b) (6)] has accepted the invitation of the House of Representatives Veterans' Affairs Committee's invitation to participate in their June 15 round table discussion regarding governance at the Veterans Administration. We understand that Secretary Shulkin will be attending as well. Dr. [(b) (6)] is particularly interested in letting the Secretary know he will be coming to Washington for this meeting and is very much looking forward to seeing him again.

If you know of any particular issues Dr. [(b) (6)] should be mindful in advance of this meeting, please feel free to let me know and we will bring those to his attention.

Also, if you are in Washington on June 15, perhaps you and I could explore connecting as you suggested – would welcome the opportunity if your schedule permits.

Again, I hope you are doing well and thank you for passing this information on the Secretary Shulkin.

Best,

The rules for hiring and firing Senior executive Service (SES) federal employees are very restrictive and make it almost impossible to fire anyone- thats why we are pushing for law changes. OPM makes hiring complex.

I believe the path forward is with IPAs- these are partnership agreements with universities that allow hiring with much greater flexibility. These already exist and can be utilized.

We need a HR person in VA to explain better how we can use these- as there are some limitations.

The call does provide a path forward here are the target points:
The academic partners would develop a "board of directors" who provide management experience directly to VA new managers.
Mayo Clinic has an internship program with Baylor Business School. The Dean of Wharton would have a consortium of business schools do the same for the VA. The Dean would also form a search committee to find talented new management recruits and seasoned managers for the VA.

The Trump administration has not yet set up a promised White House hotline for veterans' complaints nearly four months after President Trump took office, Military Times reported.

Load Error

Trump promised that the private hotline would be "devoted to answering veterans' complaints of wrongdoing at the VA and ensure no complaints fall through the cracks."

The hotline was to be "active 24 hours a day answered by a real person."

"This could keep me very busy at night, folks," Trump said during a July 26, 2016 rally. "This will take the place of Twitter."

White House officials told Military Times they have no updates on when or whether the hotline will be established, while VA officials did not respond to requests for comment.

The hotline was included in Trump's 10-point plan to help veterans, which was recently removed from Trump's campaign website.

Trump's re-election campaign told Military Times the changes were made to help better inform the public with "fact-based information" on Trump's accomplishments ahead of the 2020 campaign.

The 10-point plan was created last July while Trump was on the campaign trail. Only one bullet point in the plan appears to have been completed thus far - Trump's vow to "appoint a VA Secretary whose sole purpose will be to serve veterans."

The Senate confirmed VA Secretary David Shulkin in February.

Trump has repeatedly vowed in office and on the campaign trail to reform the VA and increase accountability at the department, calling the effort one of the "crown jewels" of his administration.

The VA has been criticized for years for failing to quickly fire bad employees, as well as overseeing long wait times for medical appointments and a slow benefits appeal process.

Trump signed an executive order in April creating the Office of Accountability and Whistleblower Protection, a new office within the VA, a wide-reaching office that can weed out poorly performing employees and protect whistleblowers.

Lawmakers last week introduced a bill that would legally establish the new office. If passed, it would touch on four of the plan's points - "to remove and discipline the federal employees and managers who have violated the public's trust; ask that Congress pass legislation that empowers the Secretary of the VA to discipline or terminate any employee who has jeopardized the health, safety or well-being of a veteran; protect and promote honest employees at the VA who highlight wrongdoing;" and "stop giving bonuses to any VA employees who are wasting money."

Trump also pledged in the 10-point plan to create a commission "to investigate all the fraud, cover-ups, and wrongdoing that has taken place in the VA."

Such a commission has yet to be announced.

Dr. Moskowitz & Dr. Alaigh,

Thank you for the invite to the meeting on May 15th but unfortunately I will be on an airplane at that time and will not be able to attend. Two other members of the Johns Hopkins team will be participating and will be able to contribute to the effort. As I mentioned in my previous note, before joining Johns Hopkins I worked PWC and had an opportunity led an initiative to conduct an in-depth review of Northern Indiana VA (NIHCS - VISN 11) and work with the VISN supply chain leadership. I had a chance to review my notes and thought that I would share some of those insights that may help in your effort as you seek improvements... the assessment is from 2011/12 but I believe a number of these insights may still be valid. The assessment was an in-depth review but I have attached a high-level overview of the VA status at the time against these leading supply chain practices. At NIHCS, ~$102M in non-labor spend was reviewed with a conservative ~$8M in opportunity cost improvements identified. Savings were split equally between supplies and services. In Supplies opportunities where focused on (contracts written that did not constrain extraneous cost, non-use of prime vendors, multiple products contracted in categories, p-card use for clinical products, external site ordering (i.e. punch-out's). Key Service opportunities focused on the rationalization of insource/outsource opportunities, lack of category leverage and expertise to assure proper local contract terms and pricing, alignment of capital purchases and ongoing service requirements)

Leading Practice	Assessment	Current State
Plan	Capital budgeting process does not take a total cost view, which includes equipment expense as well as ancillary costs such as human and supply resources and construction.	Basic
	Processes are mixed within the facilities resulting in operational inconsistency and inefficiency.	Basic +
Source & Procure	Overall procurement strategy is set by VA contracts and FSS pricing agreements. When contracted vendors were utilized, pricing compliance was relatively high.	Progressive
	Opportunities exist to standardize clinical and non-clinical products to fewer suppliers. Benefits include reduced costs based on product volume aggregation and reduced inventory line items and handling costs.	Basic +
Move	Supplies are handled multiple times before delivery to the end user resulting in inefficiencies.	Basic
Pay	A minimal relationship exists between front line Logistics and Accounts Payable staff, resulting in pricing discrepancy errors.	Basic +
	P-Card approval policies allow for purchases to be made up to $3K and $25K per month with only Department Chief approval, leading to more than $1.6M in purchases outside of the standard Logistics procurement process and control.	Basic +
	Payments are made at the obligation level and not consistently matched at line item level for invoice payments.	Basic +

I am happy to have a follow-up conversation with you and would also like to extend an invitation to each of you or your staff to attend our Nobilant GOP working group session. In addition to my Johns Hopkins Supply Chain and Procurement responsibilities, I am also responsible for Nobilant, Johns Hopkins owned Healthcare Group Purchasing Organizations. We have ten hospitals that participate within the Baltimore/Washington area. This group of Hospitals has come together with the goal of achieving 90% plus in alignment of our Non Labor spend. It is a patient centered approach to identifying products and services that can advance clinical outcomes at the lowest cost. Please feel free to attend as there may be additional learnings you can incorporate into your processes or we may identify opportunities where our Nobilant collaborative can be of assistance to the Washington VA.

I hope this helps, JHHS and my team stand ready to support the VA and our veterans.

Dr. Moskowitz & Dr. Alaigh,

I would be my pleasure to give you a call to discuss JHHS enterprise supply chain efforts. By way of background before joining Johns Hopkins I led PriceWaterhouseCoopers (PWC) Healthcare Provider Supply Chain Practice and had the opportunity to work with VA's VISN supply chain team as well as conduct an in-depth supply chain review of the VA's Northern Indiana Health System. (NIHCS). Those insights coupled with JHHS's patient centered supply chain efforts should provide the backdrop to identify opportunities to benefit the VA.

24-7 alert for device recalls that not only goes to central purchasing and automatically checks if the device is still on the shelf and if it was implanted, directly alerting the physician and the patient.

A device registry that barcodes every device and adds it to the patient record. An added feature to tract over utilization of implantable devices or physicians who are receiving stipends from a device manufacturer.

Tract if a particular VA is using more inventory than could be explained by patient volume to prevent pilfering of supplies.

Aside from this we are looking how to tract patients who are being treated in the private sector from having unnecessary testing, surgery or medical treatment.

Penn Medicine/ Corporal Michael J Crescenz VAMC Activities Related to Suicide Prevention

Penn has extensive suicide prevention clinical activities throughout the entire health system. Importantly, Psychiatry has a long history of ground breaking research to identify the newest and best clinical and neurobiological methodologies to identify individuals at risk and develop or discover the strongest clinical approaches to suicide prevention at both individual and population levels.

CLINICAL ACTIVITIES

Penn Military Family Clinic (Cohen Clinic): This clinic serves Veterans and their families at no charge, regardless of discharge status, providing evidence-based treatments. This state of the art short-term mental health community clinic has specific competency on military culture, often lacking in the community.

Penn Medicine:

- Risk Reduction Initiative: systematic suicide risk screening for all psychiatric patients
- Treatment and Safety Planning (a specific method for reducing suicide risk in acute and chronically suicidal populations) provides risk reducing tools and resources
- 24/7 Crisis Response Center at Pennsylvania Hospital and 24/7 psychiatrist in-house at Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania for emergency evaluation and safety assessment using validated tools
- Close coordination with Counseling and Psychological Services for University students at risk for self-harm
- Close collaboration with Community Behavioral Health and community outreach (Intensive Case Managers, Targeted Case Managers, Assertive Community Treatment teams, etc.) to ensure safe transitions of care

Corporal Michael J Crescenz VA Medical Center:

- Initiated Safety Planning and risk assessments for patients in the ED, inpatient unit and residential unit.
- Suicide prevention committee
- Comprehensive peer review of all suicides and suicide attempts
- 2 full time suicide prevention coordinators who do a host of outreach activities to high risk patients
- Policy that all mental health clinical activities address suicide risk as part of documentation

RESEARCH ACTIVITIES (see addendum for more details)

Penn Medicine:

- Cognitive Therapy for Suicidal Older Men
- Management of Suicide-Related Events during Deployment
- A Brief Intervention to Reduce Suicide Risk in Military Service Members and Veterans
- Safety Planning Intervention to Reduce Short-term Risk
- Zero Suicide Implementation and Evaluation in Outpatient Behavioral Health
- Military Suicide Research Consortium Dissemination and Implementation Core
- Suicide Risk Reduction in the Year Following Jail Release
- ED-SAFE 2: Translating Safety Planning into Practice
- Intervention mapping to develop multi-level implementation strategies in partnership with stakeholders-- Firearms means restriction for suicide prevention in pediatric care
- Attentional Fixation as a Moderator of the Association between Suicidal Ideation and Suicide Attempts
- Neurobiological Underpinnings of Two Suicide Subtypes
- Attachment-Based Family Therapy (ABFT) for Suicidal Adolescents
- Pilot Trial of Inpatient Cognitive Therapy for the Prevention of Suicide in Military Personnel with Acute Stress Disorder of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Corporal Michael J Crescenz VA Medical Center:

- A DOD funded study examines the effectiveness of home visits after psychiatric hospitalization to engage patients in care and reduce suicide after hospitalization (a vulnerable time).
- Philadelphia VA is the lead site of a 2000-patient randomized clinical trial on the pharmacogenetics of depression treatment. Precision depression care has great potential for reducing suicide risk.
- Working with VA Central Offices to increase the use of measurement-based care including the use of the 9-item Patient Health Questionnaire (PHQ-9), which contains a question about suicidal ideation and behavior.
- Joined a partnership between the VA and DOE to examine new ways of harnessing big data, including genomics for suicide prediction: <https://www.va.gov/opa/pressrel/includes/viewPDF.cfm?id=2896>

Relevant Work on Traumatic Brain Injury

Penn has been a leader in brain injury research and treatment for more than three decades. Comprised of over 25 principal investigators and directed by Douglas H. Smith, MD, the Penn Center for Brain Injury and Repair is one of only five NIH designated Brain Injury Centers nationwide. Multidisciplinary expertise spans Neurosurgery, Bioengineering, Pharmacology, Pathology, Neurology, Pediatrics, Neuroradiology, Rehabilitation, and Emergency Medicine, representing one of the strongest, most integrated research teams in the world. Working in a highly collaborative environment, these researchers are investigating the full spectrum of traumatic brain injuries (TBI) and have uncovered several important cellular and molecular mechanisms of brain trauma that are being applied to develop new therapies. Through a forthcoming Allen Foundation grant, Dr. Smith and colleagues in the School of Engineering and Applied Sciences will examine "Reconstructing Concussion" through modeling of brain network changes after injury and identifying natural repair processes and impediments.

ADDENDUM:

Penn Medicine:

- Cognitive Therapy for Suicidal Older Men: National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) Randomized controlled trial (RCT) with 95% research participants who are veterans
- Management of Suicide-Related Events during Deployment: Military Operational Medicine Research Program project provides military leaders, military health providers and chaplains with scientifically-informed guidelines and decision aids on how to respond to suicide-related events during deployment.
- A Brief Intervention to Reduce Suicide Risk in Military Service Members and Veterans: For high suicidal risk patients hospitalized at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center.
- Safety Planning Intervention to Reduce Short-term Risk: American Foundation for Suicide Prevention funded RTC to determine the efficacy of the Safety Planning Intervention
- Zero Suicide Implementation and Evaluation in Outpatient Behavioral Health: NIMH funded project compares two levels of implementation of the Zero Suicide model
- Military Suicide Research Consortium Dissemination and Implementation Core: promotes dissemination of practical, evidence-based strategies to reduce suicide risk for military service members and veterans
- Suicide Risk Reduction in the Year Following Jail Release: This NIMH RCT evaluates the cost-effectiveness of the Safety Planning Intervention for reducing suicide and attempts among 800 suicidal pretrial jail detainees
- ED-SAFE 2: Translating Safety Planning into Practice: This NIMH study focuses on Safety Planning's impact on suicide and suicide-related acute healthcare in emergency departments.
- Intervention mapping to develop multi-level implementation strategies in partnership with stakeholders-- Firearms means restriction for suicide prevention in pediatric care: This study in partnership with Mental Health Research Network stakeholders aims to increase the use of means restriction in pediatric primary care.
- Attentional Fixation as a Moderator of the Association between Suicidal Ideation and Suicide Attempts: This AFSP study examines the kind of thinking that occurs prior to suicide attempts.
- Neurobiological Underpinnings of Two Suicide Subtypes: NIMH funded study delineates two distinct biological subtypes of suicidal behavior
- Attachment-Based Family Therapy (ABFT) for Suicidal Adolescents: study provides more definitive data on the efficacy of ABFT for treating suicidal youth.
- Pilot Trial of Inpatient Cognitive Therapy for the Prevention of Suicide in Military Personnel with Acute Stress Disorder of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder: utilizes a window of opportunity during hospitalization following a recent suicide attempt to deliver a brief and targeted intervention for traumatized individuals.

Relevant Work on Traumatic Brain Injury

Penn has been a leader in brain injury research and treatment for more than three decades. Comprised of over 25 principal investigators and directed by Douglas H. Smith, MD, the Penn Center for Brain Injury and Repair is one of only five NIH designated Brain Injury Centers nationwide. Multidisciplinary expertise spans Neurosurgery, Bioengineering, Pharmacology, Pathology, Neurology, Pediatrics, Neuroradiology, Rehabilitation, and Emergency Medicine, representing one of the strongest, most integrated research teams in the world. Working in a highly collaborative environment, these researchers are investigating the full spectrum of traumatic brain injuries (TBI) and have uncovered several important cellular and molecular mechanisms of brain trauma that are being applied to develop new therapies. Through a forthcoming Allen Foundation grant, Dr. Smith and colleagues in the School of Engineering and Applied Sciences will examine "Reconstructing Concussion" through modeling of brain network changes after injury and identifying natural repair processes and impediments.

ADDENDUM:

Penn Medicine:

- Cognitive Therapy for Suicidal Older Men: National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) Randomized controlled trial (RCT) with 95% research participants who are veterans
- Management of Suicide-Related Events during Deployment: Military Operational Medicine Research Program project provides military leaders, military health providers and chaplains with scientifically-informed guidelines and decision aids on how to respond to suicide-related events during deployment.
- A Brief Intervention to Reduce Suicide Risk in Military Service Members and Veterans: For high suicidal risk patients hospitalized at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center.
- Safety Planning Intervention to Reduce Short-term Risk: American Foundation for Suicide Prevention funded RTC to determine the efficacy of the Safety Planning Intervention
- Zero Suicide Implementation and Evaluation in Outpatient Behavioral Health: NIMH funded project compares two levels of implementation of the Zero Suicide model
- Military Suicide Research Consortium Dissemination and Implementation Core: promotes dissemination of practical, evidence-based strategies to reduce suicide risk for military service members and veterans
- Suicide Risk Reduction in the Year Following Jail Release: This NIMH RCT evaluates the cost-effectiveness of the Safety Planning Intervention for reducing suicide and attempts among 800 suicidal pretrial jail detainees
- ED-SAFE 2: Translating Safety Planning into Practice: This NIMH study focuses on Safety Planning's impact on suicide and suicide-related acute healthcare in emergency departments.
- Intervention mapping to develop multi-level implementation strategies in partnership with stakeholders-- Firearms means restriction for suicide prevention in pediatric care: This study in partnership with Mental Health Research Network stakeholders aims to increase the use of means restriction in pediatric primary care.
- Attentional Fixation as a Moderator of the Association between Suicidal Ideation and Suicide Attempts: This AFSP study examines the kind of thinking that occurs prior to suicide attempts.
- Neurobiological Underpinnings of Two Suicide Subtypes: NIMH funded study delineates two distinct biological subtypes of suicidal behavior
- Attachment-Based Family Therapy (ABFT) for Suicidal Adolescents: study provides more definitive data on the efficacy of ABFT for treating suicidal youth.
- Pilot Trial of Inpatient Cognitive Therapy for the Prevention of Suicide in Military Personnel with Acute Stress Disorder of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder: utilizes a window of opportunity during hospitalization following a recent suicide attempt to deliver a brief and targeted intervention for traumatized individuals.

Dr. Shulkin: I received the below email text this afternoon from a friend. I have not discussed my candidacy with this person at all, but they obviously have heard about it through the leakage. It seems to fit the theme of the article I sent you last week. I know this person would not have sent this to me unless they trusted the accuracy of the person who told them. I am passing this along in confidence to make you aware, but also to express some concern if you were not aware these types of meeting were going on. I am aware of who is on the beachhead team, know some pretty well because of their VSO or prior VA service.....others only from introductions when I was over there. If I still have your complete confidence and support, and that of the WH (Ike, Marc Sherman, etc), then I can chalk this up to jealousy, inexperience, immaturity, or their self-inflated since of importance. I do have my own thoughts about who some might be. Although I sincerely hope there has not been any erosion of confidence and support by you or the others, If there has please let me know and I will withdraw and remain here. I would appreciate an opportunity to discuss with you....thanks. Chairman appreciated your visit this afternoon.....R/tom Hi Tom. I sincerely hope things are progressing well ... sure wish it was quicker!

I was recently informed about a discussion that occurred in VACO among members of the beachhead team at VA (shadow cabinet as they are being referred to in the press) regarding your candidacy for the DepSec role. It was described as an open discussion with career staff present. I don't know who the careerists were. Purportedly, Mr. _____, Mr. _____ and other politicals were present. The "discussion" was about why the politicals thought the candidate was the wrong person for the job. Words like too old, old school, out of touch were mentioned. Apparently a careerist who knows you from your COS days, spoke up and said that was not his/her impression of you. That person was asked to leave the discussion.

Granted this is all hearsay, but where there's smoke...

I thought you should be aware of the reported conversation. Not only do the topic and the opinions bother me, but the fact that the discussion took place really concerns me.

Subject: VA Inventory Meeting

Aaron provided the following document, I pulled out the Commentary that he wrote to highlight the important issues going forward.

COMMENTARY:

As part of the private-public partnership between the VA and the group of five Academic Medical Centers, the Mayo Clinic, the Cleveland Clinic, the Massachusetts General Hospital, Johns Hopkins and Kaiser Permanente the meeting at the Baltimore VA addressed the urgent need of a centralized Inventory Management System. The current system is over 30 years old and has resulted in a loss of billions of dollars, jeopardizing needed funds for direct patient care, and fostered a system that allowed fraud and abuse to go undetected. THERE WAS NO reference to LOSS OF BILLIONS OF DOLLARS nor jeopardy to patient care nor a system that FOSTERED FRAUD AND ABUSE. THIS IS COMMENTARY PROVIDED by AARON MOSKOWITZ.

Documented Shortcomings:

- Patient safety impacted: clinical resources diverted, hazardous devices in use, NO RECALL OF ANY DISCUSSION of the Hazardous devices REFERENCE during the presentation or discussion.

- Integrated VA wide Supply Chain management impossible.
- Poor analytics: Both quality and timeliness
- Expensive life cycle management decisions: long cycles, lacking purchasing power
- Costly Procurement decisions (Purchase card overuse)

Importantly, devices that were found to be defective have been and can continue to be implanted in veterans resulting in permanent disability and death. Immediate and secondary effects of harmful devices effects health, quality of life and create new cost and resource burdens on the VA. AGAIN THIS WAS NOT STATED. There was a presentation by Dr [REDACTED] Resnic that was generic to the industry about the importance of an effective system for recall. He presentation published papers that described the adverse outcomes. He also noted that work at been done at the VA on several of these topics and that the VA actually had some CENTERS OF EXCELLENCE ON EVALUATIONS OF THESE OUTCOMES

To quote our Hopkins representative [REDACTED]
 "I have always taken an approach that fixes the easiest and most painful problems first, then use the processes established to move the larger effort forward in good, large steps. There are some fundamental problems that can/should be fixed within 8 -14 months. Then, once it is proven to work, roll it out to the rest of the VA." [REDACTED] also exercised extreme caution at not being overly ambitious and not to try to BOIL THE OCEAN.

Most of what we are looking at involves some fairly large culture changes, which means influencing behavior. This usually takes time but can be done fairly quickly if the VA is willing to engage in a high velocity culture change effort. It has taken Kaiser 5 years to get where they are, and is thought of as one of the "highest performing" health care supply chains in the nation. There is the possibility of using Kaiser's and other Academic Medical Center's playbook to shorten the cycle time at the VA. THE KAISER REP WAS EXTREMELY HELPFUL TO THE ENTIRE DAY !!! SHE EMPHASIZED THAT WE SHOULD NOT MAKE THE MISTAKE OF THINKING THE SOLUTION IS JUST A NEW STSTEM BUT NEEDED TO BE A BROADER SYSTEM of STANDARDIZATION of data , roles and responsibilities, processes ETC.

Change starts with basic operations and gaining the trust of supply chain customers: docs and nurses. [REDACTED] (Kaiser) notes:

If VA's supply chain can't get a Band-Aid into the hands of the person needing it, it is going to be very hard to get them on board to tackle the big vision challenges that lie ahead."

Interoperability, standardization and centralization will allow agile development of a new system. For example, considering all five AMCs use Epic EMR, the VA can readily adopt existing solutions if they are also using Epic. The VA Technology Transfer Office should also adopt best practices from AMC TTOs to quickly engage and protect intellectual capital. THERE WAS NO DISCUSSION OF THE FOLLOWING THINGS AT THIS MEETING: Hopkins being willing to give us their system, any discussion of an EMR, any discussion or offer of help writing code to link any two systems together, OR THE VA TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER CENTER

Supply chain management Listening Session

This document is my effort to organize discussion points and is not minutes of the meeting, my day of notes, nor a final white paper. Some material contained here may not have been presented at the meeting but is included to provide context.

Overview:

- Create a new, effective, and holistic system
- Idealized case scenarios were discussed but should not be chased
- This system can not carry the water for existing initiatives, programs, positions
- Asses with a mirror instead of a yard stick.
- The system we discussed should be readily capable for achieving goals but not designed to meet them. This is a future looking system in a radically evolving space. Attributes of a healthy and effective system will achieve discrete goals that can be validated with metrics.

Attendees and participants volunteered time and experience. I preface this document with the I Care Values and an excerpted statement form the VA director to shape frame the ideas presented later.

Aaron Moskowitz
Executive Director
Biomedical Research &
Education Foundation

VA Goals

"Now, I look forward to continuing our collective efforts across the department and our country to deliver the care and services our Veterans need and deserve. Among many critical efforts already underway, we will continue building on significant progress increasing access for Veterans, preventing suicide, addressing unique needs of women Veterans, supporting Veterans' families and caregivers, continuing to drive down the disability backlog and Veteran homelessness, and pursuing necessary legislation to reform the outdated appeals process and for other critical legislative priorities."

-Dr. David Shulkin

Summary

1. Increasing Access for Veterans
2. Preventing Suicide
3. Addressing Unique Needs of Women Veterans
4. Supporting Veterans' Families and Caregivers
5. Drive Down Disability Backlog & Veteran Homelessness
6. Reform Appeals Process

I Care Core Values

Integrity, Commitment, Advocacy, Respect, and Excellence (I CARE) define "who the VA is," VA's culture, and help guide the actions of staff across VA. Staff - at every level within VA - play a critical role to support VA's commitment to care and serve our Veterans, their families, and beneficiaries.

Integrity: Act with high moral principle. Adhere to the highest professional standards. Maintain the trust and confidence of all with whom I engage.

Commitment: Work diligently to serve Veterans and other beneficiaries. Be driven by an earnest belief in VA's mission. Fulfill my individual responsibilities and organizational responsibilities.

Advocacy: Be truly Veteran-centric by identifying, fully considering, and appropriately advancing the interests of Veterans and other beneficiaries.

Respect: Treat all those I serve and with whom I work with dignity and respect. Show respect to earn it.

Excellence: Strive for the highest quality and continuous improvement. Be thoughtful and decisive in leadership, accountable for my actions, willing to admit mistakes, and rigorous in correcting them.

Goals Presented by Dr. [REDACTED]

1. Greater Choice
2. Modernize system with infrastructure improvements
3. DoD VA coordination, Private public partnerships
4. Improve Timely Service
5. Suicide Prevention

Agenda Items

These are the solutions for Inventory Management that our private public partnership Can assist in implementing.

- A system that monitors purchasing, inventory, and assists decision making
- Tracking utilization of medical technology that would help identify fraud and abuse.
- Detection of over utilization. Does one particular surgeon use for instance use only one company hip joint instead of the standard one purchase (apparently this is a problem)
- A device registry that can track recalls and ensure recalled devices are removed from inventory and practice (for instance a defibrillator or laboratory reagent may have had a recall but the VA in Alaska still as not pulled it from service)
- Recording of device information in a patient's EMR: the device (UDI), who implanted it, related outcome measures. Again, the information should aid decision making for the VA patient population
- Be compatible with patients receiving devices outside a VA hospital, as part of Veterans Choice Program
- Surveillance to track complications from implanting a device either from surgical complications or actual device failure
- The system for drugs, implanted devices, hospital equipment, home use devices, etc.
- Benchmarking prescribing and ordering by doctors and administrators

Approach

- 1) Functions follows Form, Build the basics right and the desired attributes will arise: Benefits and desired attributes are byproducts of an effective system, not design goals. This design philosophy will allow iteration.
- 2) The System
 - 1) Specialized experience above internal experience
 - 2) Stakeholder driven, with dedicated roles (Full, part -time) and leadership positions
 - 3) Adaptive organization structure to quickly address needs
 - 4) System components are iterative after execution, not end points or static
 - 5) Scalable (up and down)
 - 6) Creates validation metrics
 - 7) Technology framework is open and interoperable systems
- 3) The Pathway
 - 1) Leverage experience at medical centers (Coalition of academic medical centers)
 - 2) Find specialists in other industries
 - 3) Organizational structure is centralized and standards are adopted
 - 4) Adopt and test technology fast
 - 1) Don't develop internally
 - 2) If it doesn't work, quickly unplug and terminate
 - 5) Avoid oversized solutions that run afoul of the Form

Pilot Program at the Baltimore VA Medical Center

Objective is to create a system that can "Centralize and Standardize" inventory management across all VAMCs.

- A. Standardization of Process
 - A. How to do: ordering, receiving, distribution, billing, etc
- B. Standardization of Technology
 - A. e.g. GS1
- C. Standardized System Attributes
 - A. Future facing to new technology (Smart Devices)
 - B. Data integration and application
- D. Centralize Supply Chain Management System
 - A. Organization is standardized through out VAMCs
 - B. Attributes are common job descriptions, processes, etc.
- E. Centralize Supply Chain Management Attributes
 - A. Revenue, Pricing, Billing, Item Master (formulary)
 - B. National contracts and buying power for
 - A. lower prices
 - B. security of supplies
 - C. purchases meet required standards for the system

Expected Attributes

- Filling the gaps of other systems
 - Device safety and efficacy
 - True Pricing
 - factor in external costs (e.g. follow up care after procedure)
 - missed revenue opportunities (e.g. bundled payments)
- Patient and family/caregiver engagement
 - For data collection
 - Compliance and adherence to prescribed treatments
 - Outcomes
 - Inventory tracking (including opioids, equipment, expensive prescriptions)
- Optimization of purchasing
 - Creation of a centralized formulary or item list
 - Cost reduction in group practicing
 - Dictate features or orders
 - Ensure reliable supplies
- Metrics (fast and reliable)
 - On process
 - Performance of purchased goods and services
 - Educate stakeholders and validate positions taken
- Optimizes workflow
 - Professionals don't need to spend time on tertiary tasks
 - Billing, Patient record, administrative records, etc. are all web accessible
- Individual applications work right out of the box
 - Digital health, telemedicine, remote monitoring, and future technologies integration plug-in fast and easy. This is both an administrative and technology attribute.

Action Items

- Report from Dr. [REDACTED] to group by Friday May 19th
- Communication with Undersecretary Poonam Alaigh, MD
- Create a report from Academic Medical Centers
 - Kaiser, CCF, Mayo, Mass General, Mount Sinai and Johns Hopkins to present back to secretary and undersecretary.
- Internal Reports from VA made public (to avoid conflict)
- Bring in external resources and information

VHA Supply Chain Scope

Causes for Supply Chain Inefficiencies and Costs

- Not integrated with other systems/ processes (eCMS, MSPV, Maximo)
- Multiple discrete/antiquated systems including FMS, IFCAP GIP
- Lack of Standardized data as evidenced by unique naming standards in individual VA Medical Centers
- No standard workforce management/ training/education (adoption is throttled by “this is how we do things here” mentality)

Future Supply Chain Management System Requirements

- Create an enterprise system to replace the current disjointed instances and varied support systems to provide:
 - Cloud-based consistent and standard data
 - Advanced analytical support for decision making
 - Web-based platform for maintainability and accessibility
 - Single interface to related systems (e.g. Finance, Contracting)
 - Will interface with the new USDA Shared Service Platform
- Enable professional staff to realize their full potential with an efficient/effective technical infrastructure.
- Operationalize advanced technical capabilities provided by reviewing and modifying processes and policies as needed

Subject: Employment Insurance

Ike- The issue we discussed is related to stopping the unemployment insurance for veterans once they are eligible for social security payments. This was used as an offset to fund the additional funds made available to fund additional care in the community.

I think that the article below describes the concerns pretty well.

Also if the opportunity is appropriate feel free to remind the President that I am more than willing to help him on healthcare reform if needed.

Thanks

AMVETS Deeply Concerned by President's Proposed Cuts to Veteran Benefits

AMVETS National Headquarters, May 24, 2017 – While AMVETS (American Veterans) is thankful for President Trump's proposed 6 percent increase in the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs' fiscal year 2018 discretionary budget, AMVETS leadership is deeply concerned by the proposed cuts to earned benefits for perhaps the most vulnerable segment of the veterans population.

The Trump administration's budget proposal contains a provision to cut Individual Unemployability (IU) benefits for seriously service connected disabled veterans aged 65 and older. This would steal a large percentage of a wounded, injured or ill veteran's compensation.

The argument for this cut is that these senior citizens would be eligible for Social Security retirement benefits at age 65. That argument is flawed because these veterans have largely been disabled, out of the work force and not paying into Social Security for many years before reaching 65. Many have been severely disabled as a result of their military service and unable to work since the day of their discharge.

Such a misguided move would wrongly take away about $1,200 a month from a single veteran rated at 90 percent disabled and already determined to be unable to work because of his or her military service. The monetary loss rapidly increases for veterans with lower disability ratings. In all, this proposal threatens to strip benefits from more than 225,000 senior citizen veterans who've been seriously disabled as a result of their military service.

AMVETS strongly opposes this proposed cut and calls for its immediate withdrawal.

This cut, along with cuts to Cost of Living Adjustments (COLA) for veterans, is being used to assure funding for a “choice” program that has yet to be adequately developed, let alone tested and proven.

Other veteran groups also strongly objected to two legislative proposals included in the budget; one that would penalize millions of disabled veterans or survivors by rounding down cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs) for recipients of VA disability compensation and certain other benefit programs; and the other to cutoff eligibility to recipients of disability compensation due to individual unemployability (IU) once they reach age 62.

“We are adamantly opposed to a 10-year round down of veterans’ disability compensation, which would have the cumulative effect of taking $2.7 billion away from injured and ill veterans who rely on such payments. We are equally opposed to arbitrarily cutting off eligibility for IU for veterans who turn 62, an age at which millions of American’s continue working and saving money for their retirements, a luxury that many disabled veterans do not have. Congress must reject any proposals that seek to shift the cost of VA health care or benefits onto the backs of disabled veterans,” said the IBVSOs.

Here are some updates I did not get a chance to mention at the 1 on 1.

1. Leave - I need leave from May 24-26 as I have a number of doctor visits back in California, including the inside of my knee started having pain.

Sorry to hear this hope you get some relief

I would also like to take leave for June 8-9, as it is my nephew high school graduation. On leave I always check my phone and email in case you need anything.

ok

2. Senator Cruz: I met with [REDACTED] his staffer who handles veterans policy. Cruz wants to get active with veterans policy and legislation. At the meeting he has with you on May 23 he will want to discuss the latest on Choice 2.0. His staff has been talking to Rep McMorris - Rodgers staff about where VA healthcare should go and he is a big fan of CVA and their Fixing Veterans Healthcare Taskforce report. In the short term, Cruz wants to be lead on introducing smaller and narrow focused legislation that can get passed quickly, bills that are 5 pages or less, so I expect he will bring that up and may have some ideas in mind and/or ask if there is something you would like.

3. Senator Cochran - Chairman of Senate Appropriations committee. I met with his staffer Elizabeth who asked to meet with me to get an understanding of VA and Veteran issues. The Senator wants to be supportive of you, VA and of Choice 2.0. They would like to be kept in the loop on budget issues. As we go forward with Choice 2.0. and want to provide more choice, his support will be key for you. Recommend you have a meeting with the Senator down the road like in June, when it is clear what you need help with on Choice budget issues like medicare subvention.

4. WH - [REDACTED] Office of Public Liaison. I had a great meeting with [REDACTED] on Friday, I have been friends with her for 20 years. We discussed what the status is with the WHOAH. A new Office of American Heroes will not be stood up. Instead all of its functions will be done through her office as the WH Warriors Initiative. The initiative will have teeth as it will be run through her office and will coordinate with the WH offices, DoD and VA, with sponsorship from the first lady and Mrs Pence. [REDACTED] is looking forward to working closely with me and VA going forward on coordination and support of veterans issues, interagency efforts and veterans policy. She would like for us to keep her updated on new VA policy developments. I think her office could be very helpful in our efforts on passing Choice 2.0. and the pilots.

This is good- lets try to get VA as involved in these efforts, and be supportive as possible. I think you can play an important role in keeping the sunlight between us and them as little as possible- thanks

4. WH - [redacted] Office of Public Liaison. I had a great meeting with [redacted] on Friday, I have been friends with her for 20 years. We discussed what the status is with the WHOAH. A new Office of American Heroes will not be stood up. Instead all of its functions will be done through her office as the WH Warriors Initiative. The initiative will have teeth as it will be run through her office and will coordinate with the WH offices, DoD and VA, with sponsorship from the first lady and Mrs Pence. [redacted] is looking forward to working closely with me and VA going forward on coordination and support of veterans issues, interagency efforts and veterans policy. She would like for us to keep her updated on new VA policy developments. I think her office could be very helpful in our efforts on passing Choice 2.0. and the pilots.

This is good- lets try to get VA as involved in these efforts, and be supportive as possible. I think you can play an important role in keeping the sunlight between us and them as little as possible- thanks

Here are some updates I did not get a chance to mention at the 1 on 1.

1. Leave - I need leave from May 24-26 as I have a number of doctor visits back in California, including the inside of my knee started having pain.

Sorry to hear this hope you get some relief

I would also like to take leave for June 8-9, as it is my nephew high school graduation. On leave I always check my phone and email in case you need anything.

ok

2. Senator Cruz: I met with (b) (6) his staffer who handles veterans policy. Cruz wants to get active with veterans policy and legislation. At the meeting he has with you on May 23 he will want to discuss the latest on Choice 2.0. His staff has been talking to Rep McMorris - Rodgers staff about where VA healthcare should go and he is a big fan of CVA and their Fixing Veterans Healthcare Taskforce report. In the short term, Cruz wants to be lead on introducing smaller and narrow focused legislation that can get passed quickly, bills that are 5 pages or less, so I expect he will bring that up and may have some ideas in mind and/or ask if there is something you would like.

3. Senator Cochran - Chairman of Senate Appropriations committee. I met with his staffer Elizabeth who asked to meet with me to get an understanding of VA and Veteran issues. The Senator wants to be supportive of you, VA and of Choice 2.0. They would like to be kept in the loop on budget issues. As we go forward with Choice 2.0. and want to provide more choice, his support will be key for you. Recommend you have a meeting with the Senator down the road like in June, when it is clear what you need help with on Choice budget issues like medicare subvention.

Subject: Choice Thoughts

I read the latest version of the new Choice plan and legislation and they are pretty good. Especially good is the draft language for the pilots. The pilots gives us the opportunity to test out everything we need to do to become a modern healthcare system, they are the future salvation of the system, the bold change, and they keep the Trump promise that veterans will be able to choose either the VHA providers or the Community Providers. The one item I am going to double check with Baligh is to make sure in the pilots we can have non-eligible veterans use the system when they bring full payment. Part of the pilot language includes a section for innovative payment for non-veterans. Most people do not realize up to 10% of our patients are currently non-veterans and we are probably not collecting the payment for services we should be for those patients.

I expect Rep McMorris-Rodgers to take her draft bill and introduce it as a regular bill by June 23. She is supposed to be coordinating with Dr Roe so he understands what she is doing. She does not expect her bill to go anywhere, but to provide us cover and make the Roe bill, which will have the VA draft language and pilots, look like a moderate compromise. She is good with that as the pilots provide her with what she really wants, and her compromise will be the pilots staying intact.

I do have some recommendations on a few areas:

1. In the VA draft language, we do not mention primary or secondary payer. You will get questions about it and Dr Roe and Sen Lee will want it in the final legislation for community care as cost mitigation. Recommend we internally cost out 2nd payer and have numbers ready if needed. I also recommend you have that great chart available, VIP services can grow over time, IF VA can act more like the private sector.
2. A cost mitigation strategy we do not discuss under Revenue Optimization, is the idea I mentioned to you the other month about better identifying what truly is service-connected treatment and not just checking off the box. Recommend we start doing this now. The more we move service connected treatment to non service connected treatment, the more we can collect from OHI additional revenue. If we were in the private sector this would be a top priority, and so it should be for us. This does not cost the veteran any more money, but gets us additional revenue we need.

3. As we discussed Friday, without the 40 mile and 30 days standard, it is less clear what the guidelines are for accessible (access) and feasible (distance). I recommend we use as an internal guideline the DoD TRICARE Prime standard listed below. This would not be a requirement, but as a flexible internal and non-binding guideline, would provide clarity and consistency with staff and veterans on how we are approaching it. All veterans on active duty or retired have this had this as their choice standard and it would make the transition easier for veterans as they would have the same standards going from DoD healthcare to VA healthcare. In practice you do not actually use it much. In the two years that my care has been at Camp Pendleton, I have never needed to use it, as the system has been working. If they could not provide me the care under these standards, I have always been given an authorization and referral for the providers in the network. I think having these standards in DoD has kept their management and providers honest as this is their competition.

TRICARE Prime for access standards

	Urgent Care	Routine Care	Referred/ Specialty Care	Wellness/ Preventive Care
Appointment wait time	Not to exceed 24 hours	Not to exceed 7 days	Not to exceed 28 days	Not to exceed 30 days
Drive Time		Within 30 minutes from home	Within 60 minutes from home
Wait time in office	Not to exceed 30 minutes for non-emergency situations

Jared - Hope you are well and hope you remember me and my program. I know it has been a very busy past several months but I am writing to ask if you might be able to introduce me to the person in the administration to discuss assisting our returning veterans find new, meaningful careers. Ideally - perhaps you might take a brief call with me.

I have an idea for you which would require no funding and no legislation but could make a very significant impact on the lives of many who have served - particularly our enlisted service members, who are often overlooked by corporate America. I just need 10 minutes with the right person to outline.

Please let me know if you can give me a few minutes or if there is a person whom I might talk with.

Subject: Veteran Mentoring Program - American Corporate Partners

Jared - it may be that I can be more articulate by phone with you or someone at the campaign but let me explain ACP for a bit and perhaps offer a few ideas:

ACP offers 2 programs-

Primarily we offer a national, 1:1, year-long and customized mentoring program for returning veterans. ACP currently is providing mentoring to 2500 veterans nationwide. The mentors are mostly corporate employees (both at the executive level, eg Rupert Murdoch and J&J CEO (b) (6) Bloomberg's Peter Grauer and more traditional corporate employees as well as manufacturing employees at companies such as Alcoa, Caterpillar, GM and Whirlpool). Nearly 70% of our ACP veteran "Proteges" were enlisted and their average age is 34. In addition, we launched a women's program with great success this spring. The campaign could salute the American spirit in a talk about how we as a nation can assist our returning veterans - and ask corporate America to join us. In addition, we could use funding to build out the program so we can double our size. While we have 60+ Corporate Partners, a number of large companies have recently decided to deemphasize veterans programs as they believe the issues facing our veterans have receded in recent years.

ACP offers a second program - the one that President Clinton, David Petraeus and others are supporting: ACP AdvisorNet (acp-advisornet.org). This is a "quick question on-line community" open to millions of veterans who are seeking career guidance. The community is open to every veteran and every citizen and is completely free. It is meant to be scalable and can handle millions of Americans who wish to be engaged. We don't sell ads or market to anyone; it's a pure mission to assist our returning military. We could use help in informing the public that it exists.

For this program, President Clinton has filmed a PSA as have David Petraeus, GE's Jeff Immelt and WWE's John Cena. In addition, Karl Rove and David Axelrod have filmed a joint PSA as have Sarah Palin and Jon Stewart. We were also able to convince the CEOs of Coke and Pepsi to film a joint PSA as well. The theme is that while people may disagree about issues, we all agree that we should help our returning troops. The PSA campaign may be seen here.

If Mr Trump were interested, he could publicly offer to film a joint PSA with Mrs Clinton - to highlight the need for our citizens to offer career advice to those who have served.

I'm happy to help in any way but please note that while I am a supporter of your father-in-law, I need for my non-profit to be seen as bi-partisan and politically neutral. Lastly - I take zero compensation for my work with ACP. It's simply my attempt at public service.

Happy to discuss or meet if there is interest.

Best regards,

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Missouri Republican gubernatorial candidate Eric Greitens frequently recounts how he used his military combat pay from Iraq to found a charity that helps veterans transition to the private-sector through volunteer work.

Although Greitens initially took no salary at The Mission Continues, federal tax records show he eventually received $700,000 from the charity — a fact his Democratic opponent highlighted in television ads that began airing Wednesday.

One of the ads by Democratic Attorney General Chris Koster accuses Greitens of diverting money intended for veterans to instead promote himself.

The ads mark Koster's most aggressive criticism yet of Greitens, who has built his campaign around his remarkable resume as a Navy SEAL officer, worldwide humanitarian and founder of The Mission Continues. In one of Greitens' previous ads, an Army veteran credits Greitens with saving his life though the charity's help.

An Associated Press review of the charity's Internal Revenue Service tax filings, independent audits and annual reports shows that The Mission Continues has grown significantly since Greitens founded it in 2007. The proportion of its revenues spent on programs is comparable to other charities or slightly better. Greitens' salary was perhaps somewhat higher than similarly situated charities but not extravagant, according to analysts who focus on nonprofits.

Greitens told the AP in an interview last week that he used about $2,500 to $3,500 of his military pay, plus donations from two other military friends, to launch The Mission Continues, which originally was named The Center for Citizen Leadership. The St. Louis-based charity provides grants for veterans to work in temporary fellowships at other charitable organizations as a way to serve their communities and develop skill sets that can lead to jobs.

Records show Greitens worked without pay in 2007 and 2008 as The Mission Continues got underway. After receiving a grant from the Draper Richards Kaplan Foundation, Greitens was paid a total of $150,000 from mid-2009 through 2010. As contributions continued to flow into The Mission Continues, Greitens' salary was raised to $175,000 in 2011 and he received a $25,000 bonus that year. His salary remained at that level the next two years, before he stepped down as CEO in 2014.

According to a 2014 report by Charity Navigator, which evaluates nonprofit organizations, Greitens' salary was about one-third higher than the $131,000 median compensation for chief executives of 237 medium-sized charities in the Midwest.

"I don't think it's to the point where it's egregious or it's a huge red flag," said Sandra Miniutti, vice president of marketing and chief financial officer at Charity Navigator. But "looking at the data, it is on the high side for a charity located there of that size."

Daniel Borochoff, president and founder of CharityWatch, discounted comparisons made largely by geography and the finances of the charities. He said it's better to look at a charity's mission and the qualifications needed to lead it. As a former Navy SEAL officer with a doctorate degree in politics from Oxford University in England, Greitens would carry appealing qualifications to a veterans service organization.

Borochoff said Greitens' wages "seem within a reasonable range."

The leaders of The Mission Continues "do have a big responsibility with this program, dealing with kind of a complicated population, so people shouldn't make that comparison to their own salary," he said.

Koster is paid about $116,000 annually as attorney general.

Annual reports by The Mission Continues show Greitens gave an equivalent of at least 5 percent of his $175,000 salary back as a donation to the charity starting in 2011. He continued to contribute after leaving the organization and has given a total of more than $50,000, said Greitens campaign manager Austin Chambers.

Koster's ads also criticize about $619,000 paid by The Mission Continues to what the ads characterize as "image consultants." The ads show brief video clips of Greitens appearing to have makeup applied to his face while implying the money was meant to spruce up Greitens' image for his political campaign.

The money at issue was paid to the St. Louis-based public relations firm FleishmanHillard in 2013 and 2014. Chambers said it went toward a rebranding of The Mission Continues, as well as marketing and outreach efforts.

Greitens' campaign quickly attempted to use Koster's new ads as a fundraising tool. It distributed an email to supporters saying "Chris Koster should be ashamed of himself for attacking an organization that helps veterans" and urging them to "chip in $3, $5, $10, or whatever you can" to fight back.

Subject: From ny post today. I know you intend to fix this

I thought you might be interested in this story from the New York Post.

As we commemorate our honored fallen soldiers on Memorial Day, I ask my fellow New Yorkers to take note of the roughly 20 veterans who commit suicide every day. The mental-health issues many of our veterans face is a serious problem that must be addressed.

Fortunately, there are ways to improve this immediately. Unfortunately, it shouldn't have taken this long.

We got a stark reminder of this on May 18.

A man was sitting in his car just before noon, ready to go for a drive because he needed to clear his head. He started the engine, all the while trying to fight off the loud voices clamoring in his brain. His mind spiraled out of control, he did a U-turn and slammed his car into a crowd of people in Times Square. He killed a young woman and injured 22 others.

This man is a US Navy veteran. This man has a mental illness. This man is not alone.

According to the Department of Veterans Affairs, in 2014 an average of 20 veterans committed suicide each day, shining a light on only the most visible group of vets suffering from mental illness. Of those 20, only six were users of VA services. Veterans who are dishonorably discharged or who make too much money wouldn't be eligible for counseling.

A Government Accountability Office study published this month showed that 60 percent of troops who have been discharged for misconduct in recent years suffered from post-traumatic stress disorder or some other type of brain injury.

In addition, there are thousands of veterans with active duty, National Guard and Military Reserve service who were honorably, or less-than-honorably, discharged from the military who don't get the mental-health counseling they need because the eligibility requirements and the VA health system's complex bureaucracy put such treatment too far out of their reach.

Overall, there are roughly 20.8 million veterans in the United States. Of those, 7 million are enrolled in the Veterans Health Administration.

One of the main reasons for lack of enrollment is the high number of veterans who were dishonorably discharged, don't qualify because of their income or served in other branches such as the reserves.

The VA estimates 22,000 veterans with mental illnesses have received other-than-honorable discharges since 2009. They would all be ineligible for mental-health counseling through the VA.

That's why I have introduced legislation that would provide free mental-health counseling to all United States military veterans. This bill would ensure that any veteran — whether they're active duty, discharged honorably or dishonorably or served in the National Guard or in the Military Reserves — is given full access to the help and treatment they need.

But here's the thing: The process of going through the bureaucracy of demonstrating mental illness to VA officials can dissuade even veterans who are currently eligible from seeking help.

Eliminating the discharge- and income-eligibility process will help all vets. It'll increase the number of now-eligible vets getting care as well as speed up the process of getting treatment for everyone.

Many of us have seen a veteran who lost a limb or suffered a severe burn while fighting overseas. What none of us sees are the mental wounds that come with serving.

They don't just vanish, they can't be stitched back together and they can't be easily explained to bureaucrats. They linger with our men and women through dark and lonely nights, where the only voices they hear are the ones from the battlefield.

This is a very real and serious epidemic we're facing in our country. We have an obligation as a grateful nation to say "thank you" to our veterans by caring for each one of them, not just talking about it.

With Memorial Day here, let's remember that parades, waving American flags and "saluting our troops" are all essential, but we also need to serve our living veterans when they are truly at their lowest moment.

Rep. Thomas Suozzi, a Democrat, represents New York's 3rd District.

We will be traveling separately and will be around folks at all times - just missing my time with David - and you know what happens to me when I don't get that fully focused me-time with him. Yup, irritability and frustration.

But don't worry, I understand- it's more important for you to take care of yourself - you have been on over drive and although you are enjoying yourself, you still need time for yourself- I understand.

I know I can always get you when I need you - and I will get used to our prn vs regularly scheduled times. Just take care of yourself- and know that I am always there for you!!

OUR 5 ACADEMIC CENTERS AGENDA:

The Veterans will need an app that provides for the appropriate medical facility and or physician that is geotagged to their location. It should list the closest certified cardiac center, stroke center, trauma center and pediatric center. It should also list qualified urgent care centers.

We will need the ability for Veterans to download the records from both the Veteran sector (Veterans have access to a portable record) and private sector on their portable device. It should have the feature that would prevent duplication of tests at the time of ordering at the point of contact and the ability to send information back to their primary doctor in real time. It should also have a feature to prevent unnecessary testing and over utilization.

We need a technology solution for tracking medication compliance, prevention of over utilization of controlled substances and prevention of medication errors.

Currently the medical discharge everywhere is antiquated. Patients are discharged by a floor nurse with a list of medication. We need a system that automatically checks that the patient picked up the medication and does not confuse it with medication at home. Second, track follow up appointments, health care services for home care and distributes all information to the health care team.

Greater Choice: We Are Listening

Our stakeholders have identified the following challenges:

17

Multiple, inflexible programs, each with separate rules, red tape, and administrative burdens creates delays in care.

Eligibility criteria are administratively-focused (e.g. 30 days/40 miles) and overlook Veterans clinical needs.

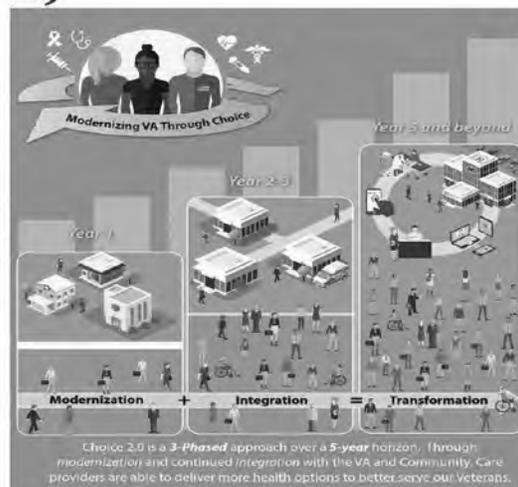

Lack of standardized care coordination inhibits delivery of high-quality, personalized care

Absence of modern payment and delivery models prevents VA from adapting to the changing healthcare landscape.

Currently, only some populations have a choice between VA and community care.

- Build a high-performing, integrated network of care

Based on what we received, and our (VHA) goals, I've revamped the agenda to be a little more palatable. Please review and let me know your thoughts at your earliest convenience; I'd like to baseline and run approval through A/USH tomorrow. Then we can transmit, along with consolidated biographies, on Wednesday. Disclaimer. any omissions are purely an oversight on my part 😊!

There is one outlier: Mr. Moskowitz has requested a telecom for some of their attendees. [(b) (6)] is working to obtain a specific list and location of those attendees—and, it will have to be monitored closely (business sensitive meeting). The only option to do that is Lync—VANTS won't tell us who is listening in, only announce when they dial in. More to come on that subject

Thanks,

(b) (6) I'd rather redefine that portion.

No problem for devices. As for drugs and opioids we can talk to them in general (b) (6) and I are familiar with managing both from previous lifetimes). If we can't redefine that portion, then I'd recommend we have someone from Pharmacy Benefits Management (Mike Valentino's shop) present. The issue then would be that my experience is they're very passionate about the relationship they've build with McKesson as their Prime Vendor. This passion could become problematic in a listening forum.

All the best,

Supply Chain Management Listening Session (Draft Agenda)

Purpose:

- Attendees will acquire a meaningful understanding of Supply Chain Management innovations
- Listening session on state-of-the-art inventory management system

Goal:

- Discuss a unique Inventory Management System beyond what is presently available at the most advanced medical centers

Location:

- Baltimore VA Medical Center – Maryland Health Care System
10 North Greene Street, Baltimore, MD 21201

For Discussion:

Discuss innovative solutions for Inventory Management:

- A system that monitors purchasing, inventory, and assists decision making
- Tracking utilization of medical technology that would help identify fraud and abuse.
- Detection of over utilization. Does one particular surgeon use for instance use only one company hip joint instead of the standard one purchase (apparently this is a problem)
- A device registry that can track recalls and ensure recalled devices are removed from inventory and practice (for instance a defibrillator or laboratory reagent may have had a recall but the VA in Alaska still as not pulled it from service)
- Recording of device information in a patient's EMR: the device (UDI), who implanted it, related outcome measures. Again, the information should aid decision making for the VA patient population
- Be compatible with patients receiving devices outside a VA hospital, as part of Veterans Choice Program
- Surveillance to track complications from implanting a device either from surgical complications or actual device failure
- The system for drugs, implanted devices, hospital equipment, home use devices, etc.
- Benchmarking prescribing and ordering by doctors and administrators

Registry-Based Prospective, Active Surveillance of Medical-Device Safety

ABSTRACT

BACKGROUND

The process of assuring the safety of medical devices is constrained by reliance on voluntary reporting of adverse events. We evaluated a strategy of prospective, active surveillance of a national clinical registry to monitor the safety of an implantable vascular-closure device that had a suspected association with increased adverse events after percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI).

METHODS

We used an integrated clinical-data surveillance system to conduct a prospective, propensity-matched analysis of the safety of the Mynx vascular-closure device, as compared with alternative approved vascular-closure devices, with data from the CathPCI Registry of the National Cardiovascular Data Registry. The primary outcome was any vascular complication, which was a composite of access-site bleeding, access-site hematoma, retroperitoneal bleeding, or any vascular complication requiring intervention. Secondary safety end points were access-site bleeding requiring treatment and postprocedural blood transfusion.

RESULTS

We analyzed data from 73,124 patients who had received Mynx devices after PCI procedures with femoral access from January 1, 2011, to September 30, 2013. The Mynx device was associated with a significantly greater risk of any vascular complication than were alternative vascular-closure devices (absolute risk, 1.2% vs. 0.8%; relative risk, 1.59; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.42 to 1.78; $P < 0.001$); there was also a significantly greater risk of access-site bleeding (absolute risk, 0.4% vs. 0.3%; relative risk, 1.34; 95% CI, 1.10 to 1.62; $P = 0.001$) and transfusion (absolute risk, 1.8% vs. 1.5%; relative risk, 1.23; 95% CI, 1.13 to 1.34; $P < 0.001$). The initial alerts occurred within the first 12 months of monitoring. Relative risks were greater in three prespecified high-risk subgroups: patients with diabetes, those 70 years of age or older, and women. All safety alerts were confirmed in an independent sample of 48,992 patients from April 1, 2014, to September 30, 2015.

CONCLUSIONS

A strategy of prospective, active surveillance of a clinical registry rapidly identified potential safety signals among recipients of an implantable vascular-closure device, with initial alerts occurring within the first 12 months of monitoring. MEDICAL DEVICES HAVE REVOLUTIONIZED health care, but assurance of their postmarketing safety relies on voluntary reporting of adverse events. This system has resulted in incomplete ascertainment and an inability to evaluate the safety of medical devices in an active, prospective fashion.¹⁻¹² Early identification of real-world differences in clinical performance among medical devices may provide opportunities to support iterative improvements in device design and complement traditional premarketing evidence to refine the selection of patients and improve the training of providers. Active surveillance of medical-device safety, through the continuous monitoring of large clinical-data sources, has been proposed to address these limitations¹³⁻¹⁵ and has been identified as a priority by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).¹⁶

This study was designed to evaluate a strategy of active surveillance of a national cardiovascular registry for assessment of the postmarketing safety of an implantable vascular-closure device. To test this strategy, we considered implantable devices for which previous reports had identified potential safety concerns. Previous studies had suggested important differences between the rates of complications after implantation of one vascular-closure device (Mynx, Cardinal Health) and the rates after implantation of alternative vascular-closure devices following percutaneous coronary intervention (PCI) and cardiac catheterization procedures performed through the femoral artery.^{13,17} Unlike other vascular-closure devices, which use a variety of mechanical and biomaterial components to help accelerate hemostasis by sealing the arteriotomy site, the Mynx device delivers a polyethylene glycol gel to the surface of the artery without mechanical anchoring. The effect of this design difference on the performance and safety of the Mynx device as compared with other available vascular-closure devices is unknown. We therefore sought to use registry data regarding this device to test our prospective, active data-surveillance strategy.

STUDY DESIGN AND OVERSIGHT

We used an active clinical-data surveillance system, called DELTA (Data Extraction and Longitudinal Trend Analysis), which prospectively monitors clinical registries and other detailed clinical-data sources for safety signals; we have previously validated this surveillance system.^{13,15,18-22} DELTA is a collection of integrated software components linking open-source database management and statistical analysis tools and is designed to simultaneously support multiple risk-adjusted prospective safety-surveillance analyses of complex clinical-data sets.^{13,15} (Additional information regarding DELTA is provided in the Methods section in the Supplementary Appendix, available with the full text of this article at NEJM.org.)

The CathPCI DELTA study was designed to evaluate the feasibility of using the DELTA system for prospective, active surveillance of medical-device safety by monitoring clinical outcomes with the identified vascular-closure device after PCI procedures. We used the CathPCI Registry of the National Cardiovascular Data Registry (NCDR) as the data source. We identified the Mynx vascular-closure device as the device of interest on the basis of evidence from previous national-registry and regional studies suggesting that the Mynx device was associated with a higher rate of access-site bleeding, injury, or need for repeat intervention than were alternative vascular-closure devices.^{13,17} The use of the Mynx device has been increasing since 2012, a factor that highlights the practical clinical importance of such analyses (Fig. S1 in the Supplementary Appendix).

A study oversight committee was established, and a written protocol (available at NEJM.org) was approved before the review of any study data. The protocol includes descriptions of the prespecified end points, analytic methods, sensitivity analyses, and plans for two interim data reviews. The study protocol was reviewed and accepted by the institutional review boards of the NCDR and the Lahey Hospital and Medical Center.

DEVICE EXPOSURES AND ADVERSE OUTCOMES

We used the CathPCI Registry to identify all the patients who had received a vascular-closure device after PCI from January 1, 2011, to September 30, 2013. We excluded patients who had undergone implantation of an intraaortic balloon pump or ventricular-assist device, those in whom non-femoral arterial access was used, those in whom more than one vascular-closure device was deployed, and those in whom the vascular-closure device did not have an implantable component. We grouped together vascular-closure devices that have identical mechanisms of action and identical implanted materials into “device families” in order to increase the analytic power (Table S1 in the Supplementary Appendix).

The primary safety outcome was any vascular complication, which was a composite of access-site bleeding requiring treatment, access-site hematoma requiring treatment, retroperitoneal bleeding, or any vascular complication requiring intervention. Secondary safety end points were access-site bleeding requiring treatment and postprocedural blood transfusion. All end points and covariates were defined according to the terms used in the CathPCI Registry, version 4 (additional details are provided in the Methods section in the Supplementary Appendix). All the outcomes were assessed until the time of hospital discharge on the basis of data that were available from the CathPCI Registry.

PROPENSITY-SCORE MATCHING

For each analysis, a propensity-matched concurrent control population was identified on the basis of a nonparsimonious propensity model. The model included previously identified risk factors as well as covariates that we selected on the basis of information from previous studies (see the Methods section in the Supplementary Appendix for details).¹³ Variables were excluded if they were found to be collinear with covariates that were already included in the propensity model. We used univariate rules to impute missing data by assuming the absence of a clinical condition for dichotomous variables and by using the median observed value for continuous variables. The final propensity model is provided in Table S2 in the Supplementary Appendix.

DATA-SURVEILLANCE PROCESS

Fully deidentified case-level data from the CathPCI Registry were provided to DELTA on the basis of scheduled quarterly updates, and the cumulative safety analysis was automatically regenerated within DELTA. Using a fixed caliper width of 0.01 and a greedy-matching algorithm,^{20,21,23} we matched control patients according to their propensity scores with Mynx recipients in a 1:1 ratio within 6 months before or after the implantation of the Mynx device. We used the absolute standardized difference in means and proportions of covariates to assess the relative imbalance between the exposed and unexposed groups, with values of less than 0.10 considered to be adequately balanced.²⁴

The primary measure of interest was the relative risk of an adverse safety outcome, which was defined as the ratio of observed event rates in the Mynx-treated patients to those in the matched control population of patients who were treated with other vascular-closure devices. DELTA alerts were triggered if the differences between the independent proportions for the Mynx device and those for the alternative devices were significant, as measured by the Wilson method.²⁵ We calculated 95% confidence intervals that were corrected for multiple comparisons using the O'Brien Fleming alpha-spending method adapted for use in prospective surveillance²⁶ (see the Methods section in the Supplementary Appendix).

PRESPECIFIED SUBGROUP AND SENSITIVITY ANALYSES

Subgroups of patients who were prespecified as being at high risk included patients with diabetes, those 70 years of age or older, and women. Sensitivity analyses included alternative event-rate estimation with the use of logistic-regression risk adjustment in place of propensity matching.

INTERIM REVIEW AND ADDITIONAL ANALYSES

After 9 months of monitoring, an early alert led the study steering committee to recommend that an additional analysis be performed to address potential bias owing to center-level effects. It was hypothesized that higher adverse-event rates might be expected at centers in which the Mynx device was used infrequently, since at such centers the device may have been reserved for patients at higher risk. We therefore performed a propensity-matched analysis that included only patients who had undergone PCI at centers in which the Mynx device was commonly used.

After review of the final study results, the FDA requested an additional analysis using the most recent data collected in the CathPCI Registry to assess the persistence of the DELTA safety signals. A protocol amendment was finalized, and data for the period from October 1, 2013, to September 30, 2015, were made available to DELTA. We recalibrated propensity-score models using data from patients who had undergone PCI from October 1, 2013, through March 31, 2014. An independent propensity-matched analysis was performed for patients who had undergone procedures from April 1, 2014, through September 30, 2015.

The study steering committee also recommended several post hoc sensitivity analyses to assess the robustness of the primary findings. These analyses included performance of a falsification-hypothesis analysis in which the original matched patient cohorts were evaluated for the development of postprocedural nephropathy associated with the use of iodine as a radiographic contrast agent (contrast-induced nephropathy), which was defined as a maximal increase in the serum creatinine level of at least 25% or at least 0.5 mg per deciliter (44 μ mol per liter) over the pre-PCI level.²⁷ For this outcome, no difference in risk among various vascular-closure devices was expected. Additional sensitivity analyses included alternative approaches to handling missing data, as well as an analysis that used center-level matching, rather than global-registry matching, in an effort to address any confounding from center-level effects. Analyses similar to the analysis performed for the Mynx device were performed for three other commonly used vascular-closure devices. Finally, we compared event rates associated with vascular-closure devices with the rates associated with manual or mechanical access-site compression for hemostasis. Additional details regarding the analytic methods and assumptions are provided in the Methods section in the Supplementary Appendix.

RESULTS

STUDY POPULATION

From January 1, 2011, through September 30, 2013, a total of 1,822,575 patients underwent PCI and had data submitted to the CathPCI Registry; of these patients, 73,164 received the Mynx vascular-closure device and met the inclusion criteria for the analysis (Fig. S2 in the Supplementary Appendix). The amount of missing data did not differ significantly between the patients who received the Mynx vascular-closure device and those who received alternative vascular-closure devices and represented 0.04% of all risk-factor data (Table S3 in the Supplementary Appendix). Propensity matching resulted in the successful matching of 73,124 patients (99.9%) who had received Mynx devices with patients who had received alternative devices (Table 1). Matching resulted in an adequate distribution of risk factors between the cohorts, with all post-matching standardized differences less than 0.10 (the threshold for imbalance).

SAFETY ALERTS FOR MYNX DEVICES

After 9 months of monitoring for the primary outcome of any vascular complication, a DELTA alert was triggered and was sustained throughout the duration of the surveillance study (Fig. 1). At the end of the study, the absolute risk of a vascular complication was 1.2% in the group that received the Mynx device and 0.8% in the group that received an alternative vascular-closure device (relative risk, 1.59; 95% confidence interval [CI], 1.42 to 1.78; $P < 0.001$). Each component of the primary safety outcome was significantly more common in the group that received the Mynx device, including the risk of major access-site bleeding, vascular complication requiring intervention, access-site hematoma, and postprocedural retroperitoneal bleeding. In addition, there was a significantly increased risk of both secondary safety end points, including the rate of access-site bleeding (absolute risk, 0.4% vs. 0.3%; relative risk, 1.34; 95% CI, 1.10 to 1.62; $P = 0.001$) and transfusion (absolute risk, 1.8% vs. 1.5%; relative risk, 1.23; 95% CI, 1.13 to 1.34; $P < 0.001$). The alerts for the secondary end points of major access-site bleeding and postprocedural blood transfusion were triggered after 30 months and 15 months, respectively, and were sustained throughout the remainder of the surveillance period (Table 2).

PRESPECIFIED SUBGROUP AND SENSITIVITY ANALYSES

Protocol-specified propensity-matched analyses were performed for high-risk subgroups: patients with diabetes, those 70 years of age or older, and women (Table 2). More than 99% of the identified patients were successfully matched within each subgroup, which resulted in the inclusion of more than 25,000 patients receiving Mynx devices in each high-risk subgroup. Within 15 months after the initiation of monitoring, safety alerts for vascular complications were triggered for all subgroups and were sustained for the duration of the study. The relative risks of any vascular complication ranged from 1.72 (95% CI, 1.42 to 2.10) among patients with diabetes to 1.94 (95% CI, 1.63 to 2.29) among those who were 70 years of age or older (Fig. 2).

In a prespecified sensitivity analysis, a logistic model was used to adjust for baseline risk in place of propensity matching. This analysis confirmed safety alerts for primary and secondary outcomes within 27 months after the initiation of safety

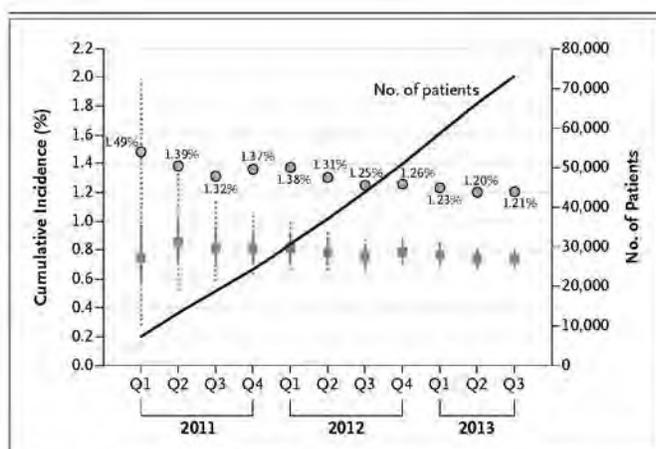

Figure 1. Cumulative Incidence of Any Vascular Complication among Recipients of the Mynx Device and Alternative Devices (January 1, 2011–September 30, 2013).

Shown is the cumulative incidence of any vascular complication (a composite of access-site bleeding, access-site hematoma, retroperitoneal bleeding, or any vascular complication requiring intervention) after the receipt of the Mynx vascular-closure device or a propensity-matched alternative device. The circles indicate observed event rates among Mynx-treated patients, with red indicating higher-than-expected rates, which triggered safety alerts. The blue squares indicate the observed event rates in the matched alternative-device group. The high values denoted by green circles fall below the upper limit of the 95% confidence intervals (solid blue vertical lines) after adjustment for multiple comparisons (dashed blue vertical lines). These findings would have triggered alerts without the adjustment for multiple comparisons. The solid black line indicates the cumulative sample size, with values shown on the right vertical axis.

surveillance, thereby supporting the primary results (Table S4 in the Supplementary Appendix).

POST HOC ANALYSIS AT MYNX HIGH-USE CENTERS

We identified 28,141 patients who had received Mynx devices at hospitals in which Mynx devices were used most frequently among available vascular-closure devices (Table 3). More than 99% of these patients (28,107) were matched with those receiving the Angio-Seal vascular-closure device at centers in which that device was preferentially used. A safety alert for vascular complications with the Mynx device was triggered after the first 12 months of monitoring, with a relative risk of 1.43 (95% CI, 1.18 to 1.73). Safety alerts were triggered for the secondary end points of access-site bleeding and transfusion within 21 months after the initiation of surveillance, and all safety alerts persisted throughout the monitoring period.

POST HOC SIGNAL-PERSISTENCE ANALYSIS

At the request of the FDA, we analyzed 49,037 additional PCI procedures in which the Mynx device was used from April 1, 2014, to September 30, 2015, to assess the persistence of the potential safety signal identified in the primary analysis. Of the patients who had undergone these procedures, 48,992 (99.9%) were successfully matched with patients who had received alternative vascular-closure devices, and DELTA alerts were triggered within 12 months for all end points (Table 3, and Table S5 in the Supplementary Appendix).

ADDITIONAL POST HOC SENSITIVITY ANALYSES

Repeating the primary analysis with the use of multivariate normal imputation²⁸ in place of simple imputation rules for missing data did not lead to any significant change in the timing of the safety alerts or estimated relative risks. Separately, to assess potential confounding owing to between-center differences, we repeated the primary analysis with patient matching performed at the center level. Using the same propensity-matching methods, we successfully matched 35,192 patients (48.1%) who had received Mynx devices and found a relative risk of vascular complications of 1.59 (95% CI, 1.40 to 1.78). We found no significant differences in estimated relative risk for any outcome or patient subgroup when we used center-level matching.

We performed a falsification-hypothesis analysis using the outcome of contrast-induced nephropathy, which was not anticipated to differ between the two groups. The relative risk of contrast-induced nephropathy in the group that received the Mynx device was 1.05 (95% CI, 0.99 to 1.11; $P=0.07$), which showed that the risk was slightly but nonsignificantly higher in the group that received the Mynx device (Table 3, and Fig. S3 in the Supplementary Appendix). Analyses of three other commonly used vascular-closure devices showed no higher risk of vascular complications than the risks in propensity-matched groups of patients receiving alternative vascular-closure devices (Table S6 in the Supplementary Appendix), whereas manual or mechanical compression was associated with a higher risk of vascular complications than the Mynx device or any vascular-closure device (Table S7 in the Supplementary Appendix).

DISCUSSION

In our study, we evaluated the feasibility of applying active surveillance to assess the safety of a commonly used vascular-closure device through prospective monitoring of a national clinical registry. We used a prespecified, active surveillance plan to monitor data from the CathPCI Registry to assess the relative safety of a vascular-closure device that was suspected of having increased safety risks over a 3-year study period. Our analysis showed a significantly higher risk of vascular complications, access-site bleeding, and transfusion requirement after PCI among patients treated with the Mynx vascular-closure device than among those treated with alternative vascular-closure devices, although the absolute risk differences were small. Among patients who received the Mynx device, alerts were triggered early, persisted throughout the duration of surveillance, and were present in all subgroups of patients. In addition, the primary results were confirmed in an independent, more contemporary cohort of patients. Analyses of other vascular-closure devices did not show the triggering of similar safety signals.

In an analysis that was restricted to centers that preferentially used the Mynx device among available vascular-closure devices, we found a slightly lower rate of safety alerts than that in the primary analysis, although the between-group difference persisted. These findings suggest that a portion of the difference in complications may be attributed to center-level experience in using the Mynx device, a finding that has been shown previously with other vascular-closure devices.²⁹

Potential safety signals that are generated through active surveillance should be interpreted with caution, since all such analyses are observational by design. Despite robust risk adjustment through propensity matching, such analyses cannot exclude the possibility that residual confounding is responsible for some portion of the observed difference in adverse events between the Mynx device and alternative vascular-closure devices.

The limited number of covariates that were selected for inclusion in the propensity model could contribute to such residual confounding, although the strategy for selecting covariates that was used in this study guarded against overfitting of the models. In addition, important clinical variables such as the anatomical location of the puncture site may have contributed to confounding of the observed relationships, but information on such variables was not available in the CathPCI Registry. Although the duration of follow-up after the PCI procedure was limited to in-hospital events, the adverse events of interest

† To assess the persistence of the potential safety signal identified in the primary analysis, a further analysis was performed on an additional 49,037 PCI procedures in which the Mynx device was used from April 1, 2014, to September 30, 2015.

‡ A falsification-hypothesis analysis was performed as one of several post hoc sensitivity analyses to assess the robustness of the primary findings. In the falsification-hypothesis analysis, the original matched patient cohorts were evaluated for the development of postprocedural nephropathy that was associated with the use of iodine as a radiographic contrast agent (contrast-induced nephropathy).

We attempted to assess for residual confounding through several post hoc sensitivity analyses. Although the data set was large, only a small percentage of missing data (<0.04%) was imputed, with the use of simple imputation and with the use of multivariate normal imputation. Case-control matching of patients in a global registry, as was used in this study, may bias results, in that patients who are treated at different centers may have different unmeasured clinical characteristics. However, in an analysis that used center-specific matching, there were no significant changes in the estimated risk differences between the Mynx device and alternative vascular-closure devices.

Finally, we performed a falsification-hypothesis analysis in which we monitored the registry for the development of contrast-induced nephropathy after PCI, although we did not anticipate that there would be an association of this adverse outcome with exposure to a particular vascular-closure device. We found that the risk of contrast-induced nephropathy was slightly but nonsignificantly higher among Mynx recipients, which indicates the possibility of a small amount of residual risk imbalance between Mynx recipients and patients treated with alternative vascular-closure devices.

In conclusion, a strategy of prospective, active surveillance of a representative clinical registry rapidly identified potential safety signals among recipients of an implantable vascular-closure device after PCI. The initial safety alerts occurred within the first 12 months of prospective registry monitoring.

Design, Implementation, and Comparison of Methods for Collecting Implant Registry Data at Different Hospital Types

Wael K. Barsoum, MD, Carlos A. Higuera, MD, Alejandra Tellez, MD, Alison K. Klika, MS, Peter J. Brooks, MD, and Preetesh D. Patel, MD

Abstract: Practical issues surrounding the official establishment of a national arthroplasty registry in the United States remain. The purpose of this study was to compare compliance and accuracy rates associated with 3 methods for voluntarily collecting implant registry data at 3 different hospital types. Methods examined included (1) scannable paper forms, (2) online forms comprising keypunching for implant data input, and (3) the same electronic form but incorporating barcode scanning for implant data entry. Overall compliance was low (930/1761; 52.8%) and decreased with each successive data collection phase. Total accuracy rate was 62.5% (578/925) and varied significantly among sites ($P < .001$). Even with relatively simple reporting systems, compliance was poor. This emphasizes the need for direct surgeon involvement, strict oversight, and a feedback system to ensure validity, particularly if a volunteer-based system is used. Keywords: implant, registry, arthroplasty, compliance, accuracy.

Rapidly changing implant designs, along with surgical innovation, enhance the need for monitoring outcomes and timely dissemination of information to the orthopedic community [1]. The current system of evaluating and reporting implant performance based on meta-analyses of multiple independent trials and large retrospective case series is inadequate. Even the well-recognized “gold standard” randomized clinical trials have inherent limitations; the sample size required and the time necessary to detect underperforming implants are extremely large. In the few cases when it is possible and feasible to conduct these studies, by the time the results are reported, the window of opportunity to influence current practice or implicate likely failure in current designs has expired [2].

Information technology innovations have made joint registries a reasonable postmarket control system. Accordingly, various joint registries have been successfully implemented at a national level throughout the world. The general aims of implementing such registries, whether at a national or at a local level, are to provide data to drive improvements in outcomes, to evaluate cost-effectiveness, and to identify risk factors for early failure [3-7].

The potential for improving the total costs of arthroplasty procedures by establishing a joint registry has been demonstrated by a reduction in the hip revision rates, leading to cost savings in Sweden [6]. Maloney [4] projected an estimate of 30 million dollars saved by decreasing hip revision procedures by 5% in the United States. There is an opportunity to accomplish this through early identification of prone-to-failure implants using arthroplasty registries. In addition, these registries have also proven to be a compelling tool for evidence-based research activities [5-7]. Data generated from these registries have been used to identify potential research areas based on outcomes that reflect real-world experience and, therefore, possess superior generalizability and validity [5].

Several practical and organizational obstacles have prevented the success of a joint registry in the United States [4]. Those barriers were related to the excessive burden of time and cost associated with data collection and submission on clinical care providers, disagreement as to what constitutes a minimum data set, and failure to define a legal framework and governance system. With the projected exponential increase of joint arthroplasties [8], the need for implementation of an American joint arthroplasty registry is crucial. In December 2010, the American Joint Replacement Registry pilot project was launched with the support of the American Association of Hip and Knee Surgeons, the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons, implant manufacturers, payers, and other organizations. The main short-term goal of this registry is to establish an infrastructure and a uniform system for collecting device information and for monitoring outcomes of joint arthroplasties throughout the United States [9].

One of the key challenges in the establishment of a national registry is the development of an inexpensive and simple documentation system that allows for the collection of accurate data and maintains a high participation rate [10,11]. Logistic issues to address when developing a registry include selection of data collection method(s), definition of data to be collected, determination of the main outcome measure, and strategies for integrating processes to daily clinical workflows [12,13].

The ideal strategy for collecting data is undetermined. Internationally, the most common method used to collect data is based on paper forms [7,11,14]. Electronic-based forms are sometimes offered as an optional alternative to paper-based data collection. Most of the well-established joint registries, such as the Australian registry, use paper-based data collection [15], whereas others, such as the British National Joint Registry, use Web-based electronic data collection [12]. Other potential mechanisms for collecting data include populating the registry with either already established local or federal databases using electronic data capture software systems [1]. In the United States, the method for data collection may vary widely among different facilities, depending on their resources and technological capabilities. The American Joint Replacement Registry pilot data collection is Web-based and is populated either directly by data provided by the hospitals or using billing or surgical databases from the different hospitals. No real-time, uniform mechanism for data collection has been established by this effort. In addition, personnel involved in this process are still undefined, and the voluntary nature of participation in collecting data may be a limitation for this project to succeed.

That data collection may be voluntary and nonuniform in the US makes the level of compliance and accuracy of the registry unpredictable. Cases of poor compliance rates have been reported when participation in the registry is not mandatory [16,17]. On the other hand, uniform registries such as the Kaiser Permanente National Joint Replacement Registry have reported 90.0% voluntary participation with a 96.7% to 98.8% compliance rate and 98.8% accuracy rate [13]. Voluntary participation and nonuniformity may have deleterious effects on the validity of the data collected.

To explore the several documentation and data handling challenges posed by the implementation of any joint registry, we designed a nonmandatory, inexpensive, and low-burden pilot data collection system. The main aims of piloting this joint registry were to (1) test the integration of 3 low-burden documentation systems in 3 different hospital settings without direct surgeon involvement, (2) evaluate data accuracy and identify a documentation method that yields the highest quality data, and (3) assess the total participation rate achieved overall and in each hospital type. The purposes of this study are to describe the development of a joint registry documentation system, report the accuracy of different data collection strategies, and provide information regarding the challenges associated with incorporating data collection processes to the clinical workflow of different hospital types.

Materials and Methods

Standardized Forms Content

Data collection forms designed for this pilot registry were adapted from the Swiss Orthopaedic Registry hip and knee questionnaires. Content was intended to be low burden and was focused on inclusion of minimal essential or level 1 data [18], as suggested by the International Society of Arthroplasty Registries [14]. We defined the minimum essential data set to include patient demographics and procedure data in addition to implants used (Table 1). Demographic data included patient name, date of birth, gender, and medical record number. Procedure data included surgeon name, date of procedure, surgery laterality, diagnosis, and hospital where the procedure was performed. Implant details included manufacturer, catalog number, lot number, size, and fixation method. Data on ancillary component use (stems, augments, screws, plates, or wires) were also recorded. Patient's medical record number served as the unique identifier that allowed linkage of revisions to primary procedures and permitted implant survival analysis. Revision forms collected the same demographic and procedure information, but removed implants and reason for revision were recorded as well. All reasons for revision were included as the end point of implant survival.

Both hip and knee procedures were collected, and 4 standardized forms were used for data collection in this study: primary knee, knee revision, primary hip, and hip revision arthroplasty forms (Appendix 1). The revision forms were designed to capture data from any intervention involving any prosthesis, including implantation, fracture repair, arthrodesis, and explant and cement spacer placement/removal.

Technical Frame

The setup of the registry followed the central server concept where all the information collected was transferred to a central MS Microsoft Access database (Microsoft Access; Microsoft, Redmond, Wash). The database was stored on a local secure server accessible only by the database administrator and backed up daily. Staff had individually assigned log-ins and passwords to the online application, and all data entry activities within the system were logged on a per-user basis to provide accountability (Fig. 1).

Workflow Integration

To facilitate the integration of data capture to the operating room practices, we asked operating room nursing personnel to be directly responsible for prospective data collection at the point of care, and their contribution was voluntary. Orthopedic surgeons were not directly involved in the registry operation or in the data collection process. Data entry was always completed immediately after the surgery. Although data entry was already part of the routine postoperative documentation processes, data capture for the registry added an extra step into the daily workflow.

Most of the expenses of handling a joint registry are directed to data collection processes [19]. To preserve the low cost and sustainability of the registry, no oversight or registry maintenance staff was hired for supervision of data entry and quality control. Nevertheless, 3 surgeon champions were selected as registry promoters at each of the 3 participating hospital types. The surgeon champions served as nonstrict oversight, as contact staff for questions or issues with the data collection process, to recruit and train nursing staff and to promote registry participation and awareness. Before each study phase, a 1-week trial period was undertaken to help answer questions and troubleshoot technical issues with members of the research team available to the nursing staff 24 hours a day.

Data Collection Strategies

Three different data capture methods were used for comparison. These included paper-based forms (phase I), online electronic forms comprising manual keypunching for implant details input (phase II), and online electronic forms incorporating barcode scanning for implant data entry (phase III). To mimic the hospital diversity that must be accommodated by a national registry, all methods were implemented separately and sequentially evaluated at 3 different hospital types including a large academic hospital, a large-sized community hospital, and a small-sized community hospital within the same health system [20]. The large academic hospital had 12 fellowship-trained adult reconstruction surgeons who perform ~2500 arthroplasties each year along with a large operating room staff (>25 people specialized in orthopedic procedures and many nonspecialized personnel employed during high volume). The large community hospital had 3 fellowship-trained adult reconstruction surgeons, 2 general orthopedic surgeons, and a small dedicated team who complete ~1000 cases annually. The small community hospital had 1 fellowship-trained surgeon, 3 general orthopedic surgeons, and an intimate staff of only 8 individuals who complete ~350 cases per year. The 3 data collection methods were implemented separately during a period that ranged from 22 to 51 weeks, dividing the study into these 3 phases. Each phase was simultaneously implemented in the 3 different hospital types where the registry was piloted. The duration of each phase ranged from 4 to 20 weeks and was stopped when approximately 80 to 100 forms were obtained from every hospital type.

During phase I, data collection was done by using paper-based forms. Each form was double sided, and completion required the user to fill in handwritten data, "bubble" fields (ie, yes/no questions), and to attach the implant label stickers (Appendix 1). Upon completion, forms were fax scanned to the central server and analyzed using special document management software (Cardiff TeleForm; Cardiff, Vista, Calif) that digitized the completed fields. If the software detected invalid forms or was not confident about its interpretation of a particular response (ie, poor handwriting, crooked barcodes, stray marks, etc), the form was presented to a human verifier for manual correction of data. After verification, the data were stored in the central database.

During phases II and III, electronic forms accessed through a secure online interface were the sole method of data entry. The distinguishing feature that differed between these 2 methods was that patient medical record number and implant details were captured with keypunching during phase II, whereas phase III used keypunching and barcode readers. An online data collection system was developed for phases II and III, and a direct data entry into the central database was possible. Both the data collection system and the database were hosted on the same central server. In contrast with phase I, the information collected during phases II and III allowed real-time data validation and quality control.

Registry Compliance and Accuracy

Evaluation of compliance and accuracy of the registry data was performed after concluding the data collection process. To determine compliance rate, a query of the operating room information system was conducted using Current Procedural Terminology [21] codes for primary and revision total hip and total knee arthroplasty cases performed during the same time frame as the data collection periods. This query represented the actual cases completed at each hospital. Compliance rate was defined as the ratio of cases with data captured to the number of actual cases performed. To assess for accuracy rate, paper and electronic medical records were compared with the information captured in the registry database. Implant information accuracy was assessed by comparing manufacturer labels found in paper medical records with the catalog and lot number stored in the registry database. Forms for which implant labels were not available in the paper medical records were excluded ($n = 5$), leaving a total of 925 arthroplasty procedures used for the final analysis. The number of fields varied by form type (ie, revision forms had more fields) and patient because of the variability of components used. Some fields were grouped together for data analysis, which yielded 15 categories (Table 1) or a total of 13 875 fields across the 925 forms. We considered overall accuracy (average number of errors), complete accuracy (all fields on the form were correct), and accuracy by each individual field in the final analyses.

Statistical Analysis

The 15 data field categories for each of the 925 forms were assigned a binomial classification to reflect whether the data matched (assigned a 1) or did not match (assigned a 0) the data in the medical record. These were compared by site and by method using contingency χ^2 analyses using SPSS (SPSS Inc, Chicago, Ill).

Results

A total of 1761 arthroplasty procedures were performed at the 3 hospitals types during the data collection periods (large academic hospital $n = 833$, large community hospital $n = 568$, small community hospital $n = 360$). Registry forms were collected for 930 of these procedures, for an overall compliance rate of 52.8% (930/1761). Compliance rates varied among sites, with the small community hospital having the highest overall compliance rate (317/360; 88.0%) and the large academic hospital having the lowest (300/833; 36.0%). Compliance rates decreased with each phase of data collection at the large academic hospital and the large community hospital, but remained fairly constant throughout the study at the small community hospital (Fig. 2).

Data on 853 primary arthroplasty procedures and 77 revisions were reported to the registry. Of these, 48.8% (450/930) were primary knee procedures, 4.3% (40/930) were revision knee surgeries, 43.3% (403/930) were primary hip procedures, and 4.0% (37/930) were revision hip surgeries. Overall compliance rate for revision procedures was low (77/285; 27.0%) relative to that of primary procedures (853/1476; 57.8%). The highest compliance for revision procedure data capture was achieved at the small community hospital (26/43; 60%), and the lowest compliance was observed at the large academic center (34/186; 18%). Compliance rate of exchange revisions (ie, all components) was higher (57/178; 32.0%) when compared with partial revision procedures (ie, revision of a single component; 19/68; 28%). Similarly, compliance was lower for revisions involving explant only (1/39; 3%) than for exchange revisions.

Overall, only 62.5% (578/925) of the submitted forms were completely accurate. There was a significant difference in complete accuracy rate among the data collection sites ($P < .001$), with the large community hospital demonstrating the highest accuracy rate across all 3 data collection methods (231/313; 73.8%) (Table 2). The least number of completely accurate forms was collected at the large academic hospital (149/300; 49.7%). There was a significant difference in complete accuracy rate among the methods of data collection as well ($P = .017$). Complete accuracy rate was greatest for phase III, in which barcode scanning was implemented, and lowest in phase I using paper-based methods.

In the 347 forms that contained errors, a total of 484 mistakes were found across all sites and phases, corresponding to an overall error rate of 3.5% (or an overall accuracy rate of 96.5%). The average number of mistakes varied significantly among sites ($F = 22.07$; $P < .0001$) but not by method ($F = 1.95$; $P = .14$). The large academic hospital had, on average, 0.88 (± 0.93) mistakes per form using the paper-based methodology, which was the highest number encountered in the study (Fig. 3). The error rate was reduced to 0.62 (± 0.78) and 0.64 (± 1.0) during phases II and III, respectively, in which a browser-based electronic form was used, although this difference was not statistically significant ($F = 1.82$; $P = .16$). Similarly, the small community hospital saw its highest number of errors per form during phase I (0.59 ± 0.76), which then decreased to 0.46 (± 0.67) and 0.40 (± 0.72) during phases II and III, respectively (Fig. 3), but was not statistically supported ($F = 1.85$; $P = 0.16$). In contrast, the average number of mistakes per form was lowest at the large community hospital during the paper data collection (0.26 ± 0.52) and was statistically different among the data collection methods ($F = 3.62$; $P = .03$).

There was variation in accuracy rates when analyzing each variable collected by site and data collection method (Table 3; available online at www.arthroplastyjournal.org). Most notable among these were 2 essential pieces of data, including implant barcode information (ie, catalog and lot numbers) and medical record number (ie, the primary patient identifier). Most of the implant data set (883/925; 95.5%) was accurate, and mistakes were found in only 42 (4.5%) of 925 forms. The significant majority of errors in the implant data set happened while using paper forms to collect this information (31/42, or 74%; $P < .0001$) (Fig. 4). Similarly, the medical record numbers collected were highly accurate, with a total of only 32 (3.5%) errors across all sites and data collection methods. Most of these mistakes occurred using the paper-based method (21/31, or 66%; $P < .0001$) (Fig. 5).

Discussion

The usefulness and reliability of a joint registry depend on the compliance and the accuracy of the data entered [22]. Implementing a joint registry is a challenge that starts with the selection of a simple reporting system that enhances the collection of accurate data and allows for a high compliance rate [12]. The goal of this study was to pilot a voluntary data collection program with minimal oversight and test the compliance and accuracy rates associated with 3 documentation strategies at 3 different hospital types under those circumstances. It is to be hoped that the results presented may aid on the decision-making process to establish a national arthroplasty registry.

A low-burden reporting system that involves collection of the minimum essential data has been shown to positively impact the quality of data and the participation rate associated with a joint registry [7,12]. Benchmarking with well-organized registries has been evidenced to be a useful approach to design effective data collection tools [13]. In conformity with this evidence, data collection instruments used for this pilot project were modeled after one of the oldest and best performing national registries [7]. Nonetheless, our results showed that overall compliance was low, particularly at the large academic hospital. Similar to the data reported by Puolakka et al [23], results from this study showed that participation rate was highest in the small community hospital. In addition, compliance decreased with each successive phase of data collection in this study. Complete accuracy rate was influenced by both the data collection method and the type of hospital where the data were collected. Two critical registry data elements, implant information and primary patient identifiers, were shown to be more accurate when collected using electronic data capture methods.

As in most of the currently established arthroplasty registries around the world, participation in this registry was voluntary [18]. However, unlike most other registries, in which completeness usually exceeds 90% of the data [12,13,18], participation was very low even with a relatively simple reporting system. The Canadian Joint Replacement Registry [16], which also implicated voluntary contribution of the operating room staff, reported a similar compliance rate of 41%. Other registries have also reported a large variation in terms of compliance and have attributed it to the burden associated with the data to be collected, the personnel involved in the data collection process, and whether or not incentives were used to uphold participation and data confidentiality concerns [22-25]. We believe that the low participation rate in this study was due to the lack of surgeon involvement, feedback system, and strict oversight.

Orthopedic surgeon support and direct involvement in data collection has been emphasized as a key factor to increase compliance [13]. This observation correlates with the higher participation rate seen at the small community hospital in this study, where the champion surgeon was more involved in the data collection process, because the number and complexity of cases was relatively low compared with the other sites. However, the progressive decrease over time in data reporting in this study demonstrates that some kind of incentive is needed to motivate continuous participation. In the experience of well-organized arthroplasty registries, a continuous feedback system (ie, periodic performance reports) can be used to incentivize participation [11,13,22,24]. In addition, legislation in favor of mandatory reporting might also improve participation rate. The registries with mandatory reporting [26] have shown better overall compliance than those that are not mandatory and have no monetary reimbursement [16,25].

Data confidentiality concern may also be a potential barrier to compliance with data reporting because results obtained from these databases may expose individual surgeons, hospitals, and manufacturers to discrimination and liability issues [27]. Accordingly, data privacy guarantees have been recognized as another crucial factor for the success of an arthroplasty registry [4,11]. Most established registries present data conclusions in an anonymous way, and only some registries give hospital units access to their own results [12]. With the intention of comparing results, some registries give access to other hospital's results by keeping the identity of the other institutions confidential [28]. Statistically significant data regarding implant and technique performance is usually presented in orthopedic conferences and scientific journals [12]. Legal implications were not a major concern for participants in this pilot registry and did not affect the results because patient outcomes were not compared using these pilot registry data.

Given the fact that missing data capture for revision procedures directly affects conclusions drawn, a high compliance rate for these procedures is critical to arthroplasty registries. This study showed that compliance for revisions was significantly lower than for primary procedures. These data concur with those of Pedersen et al [26], in which revision reporting compliance was lower than that for primary procedures. This same study [26] also showed that the type of revision most commonly missed were those involving explants, whereas the most commonly reported type of revision was exchange revisions, which is similar to what is reported in the current study.

The overall accuracy (96.5%) of the data collected was similar to what has been previously reported in the literature by other registries [11,22-24,29]. In contrast to what has been reported from the Swedish Knee Arthroplasty Register [29], the overall accuracy rates were lower in the large academic hospital than the community hospitals. We believe that this may be related with the higher level of complexity and volume of cases performed at the academic hospital, which require more documentation and, consequently, higher chances of having mistakes. Moreover, in the academic center, given the higher volume and daily variation in operating room personnel, some members of the surgical team might not be as familiarized with orthopedic implant data.

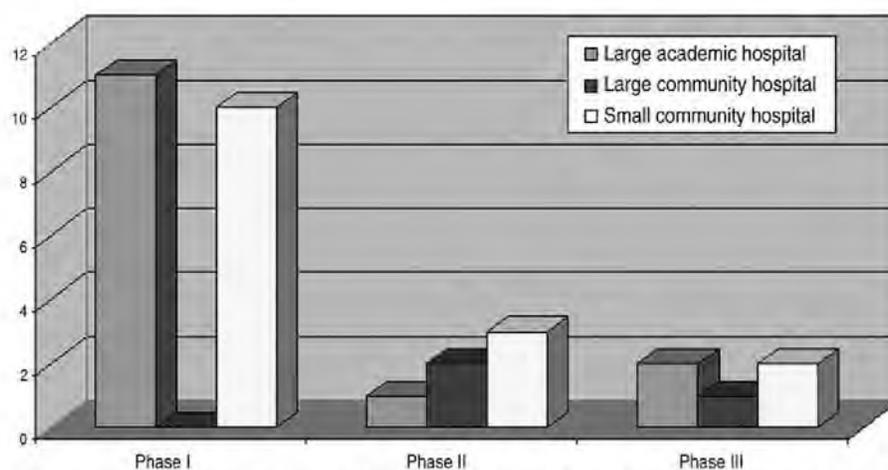

Fig. 5. Bar graph of the number of errors in collecting the medical record number, shown by site and data collection method.

Although the complete accuracy of the collected forms was low, the most valuable data of the registry (ie, the patient identifier and implant barcode information) was highly accurate. This study shows that paper-based data collection instruments achieve an accuracy rate close to that achieved with electronic data collection only when applied in the large community hospital. Arthursson et al [22] have reported similar results using data extracted from the Norwegian registry, where the most accurate information was collected on the hospital database by stable personnel and well-performed routines [22]. The success of the registry hinges on the ability to accurately capture the primary patient identifier [30] because this serves to link the registry episodes and determine trends in revision and implant failures. Unfortunately, we were not able to use social security number, the nationally recognized patient identifier, because it is considered a risk to human research subjects. Instead, we used the local medical record number as a surrogate.

When selecting the most suitable data collection method, the type of hospital, volume, and workflow should be considered. Workflow organizational effectiveness has been reported as a predictor of data accuracy and completeness [1]. Paxton et al [13] noted that minimal workload and efficient strategies for integration into the clinical workflow are vital for a successful registry data collection. Making use of existing administrative databases has also been suggested as a method to significantly reduce the burden associated with data collection processes [13]. The results observed in this study suggest that electronic-based technologies are related with higher accuracy and compliance of the data, particularly when barcode scanners are used. However, because these technologies have an inherently higher cost, hospitals with limited budgets should make informed decisions when deciding which method is most appropriate according to the volume of the hospital. Barcode scanning is not without problems, as Paxton et al [13] experienced technical problems with integration to regular documentation on large-scale data collection (ie, 43 hospitals). However, Web-based technology innovations have led to an increased use of online documentation systems [12].

The results reported here should be viewed considering the limitations of the study. Participation in this study was voluntary and involved no rigorous oversight; therefore, the sample size was relatively small. Another limitation of this study is that variables were grouped into 15 categories for data analysis to standardize the methods across all form types and interpatient variation. This gave a total field count of 13 875, which is less than the actual fields by approximately half. We recognize that it negatively affects the accuracy rate calculations but chose to use these conservative measures. Because this study was focused on collecting essential registry data (level 1 data), other important information such as comorbidities, complications, and patient-reported outcomes were not considered. In addition, we did not include a control group in the study design; therefore, we were unable to determine if compliance and accuracy rate inconsistencies were related to the method of data collection or to the lack of strict oversight and feedback systems. Finally, the 3 hospitals used in this study may not represent the overall health care system in the United States. We did not include any federal or state-funded health care facilities or for-profit hospitals.

Paper-based forms remain the standard used for many registries around the world [12]. Our data show that an unmonitored, volunteer-based collection system will not be sufficient for collecting complete and accurate data. Options to enhance and improve the compliance and accuracy of the data collected may include direct surgeon involvement in the data collection process, potential third-party oversight, and/or a continuous feedback system.

Redeeming The Promise Of A Square Deal

Chicken, anyone...?

One Veterans Affairs hospital previously plagued with repeated scandals is in the news again today for serving raw and expired food to veterans and staff.

Hines VA Hospital, located just outside Chicago, is noted have problems ranging from whistleblower retaliation to illegal surgeries killing veterans to allowing veterans to melt after death rather than be buried. The new scandal at the facility focuses on the dangerously poor quality of the food it serves to staff and veterans.

An anonymous whistleblower provided photos to The Daily Caller (TheDC) of raw chicken allegedly served to at least one of the diners at Hines VA. The whistleblower reports the food often served still raw and that many other meals are also expired when served to veterans.

When chicken is served raw and eaten, veterans are at risk of getting ill from a bacteria called Salmonella. Eating such chicken can result in gastrointestinal distress and similar problems.

The conditions complained of there have been plaguing the facility for at least a year but have gone substantively unaddressed during that time...

Redeeming The Promise Of A Square Deal

Chicken, anyone...?

One Veterans Affairs hospital previously plagued with repeated scandals is in the news again today for serving raw and expired food to veterans and staff.

Hines VA Hospital, located just outside Chicago, is noted have problems ranging from whistleblower retaliation to illegal surgeries killing veterans to allowing veterans to melt after death rather than be buried. The new scandal at the facility focuses on the dangerously poor quality of the food it serves to staff and veterans.

An anonymous whistleblower provided photos to The Daily Caller (TheDC) of raw chicken allegedly served to at least one of the diners at Hines VA. The whistleblower reports the food is often served still raw and that many other meals are also expired when served to veterans.

When chicken is served raw and eaten, veterans are at risk of getting ill from a bacteria called Salmonella. Eating such chicken can result in gastrointestinal distress and similar problems.

The conditions complained of there have been plaguing the facility for at least a year but have gone substantively unaddressed during that time...

Being sent on behalf of [REDACTED]

Dear [REDACTED]

My name is [REDACTED] and I am the head of Johnson & Johnson's Pharmaceutical Supply Chain and Manufacturing. I also have the privilege of leading our Veterans' Employee Resource Group. At the request of our CEO, [REDACTED] and the Secretary of the Veterans Administration, Dr. David Shulkin, I was asked to lead a team that is working together with the Veterans' Health Administration to urgently reduce the number of Veteran suicides from more than 20 per day to zero. There is nothing more urgent.

We have been partnering with a number of other organizations and leaders who have volunteered their time and resources to help address this crisis. One of the initiatives we are working on is an Integrated Marketing Campaign that would include a series of commercials and public service announcements to reach out and move people to act and reverse this trend. We need a very credible and committed spokesperson to help get out this message.

I understood that Mr. Hanks may have had a recent conversation with Bob Iger, CEO of the Walt Disney Company about considering participating in this effort. If he is interested, we have a draft treatment we would like to share with him and get his input.

We are flexible and will make time based on his schedule.

Respectfully Requested

Hi (b) (6)

Thank you for the email. Please can you let me have a little more information as to what this is about, and what Mr. (b) (6) may be asking of Tom. He is currently in prep on a movie which starts shooting next week, so has very little wiggle room in his schedule for the foreseeable future.

Any info you can send me would be most useful.

Thank you!

I also agree with you that you need more likeminded change agents in leadership positions to help you. Please let me know how I and the others can help you here.

Now that you have pointed it out, I see that the article was about VA benefits, unfortunately the average person reading the story doesn't realize this. They only read the headline and a take away that the VA is not properly caring for our veterans who have the worst and most traumatic injuries and move on to the next story. This is a problem until the articles start telling stories about the changes you are making and how our veterans are finally receiving the respect and care that the country owes them and that they deserve.

Ike- thanks for the note- i had two thoughts-

First - i agree with your comments and I want to assure you that we are pushing so hard and being very aggressive on all fronts- people here are in shell shock and i am being told by many people i have the organization at close to a breaking point

I am comfortable with this and realize we have to push this hard to see change- because we share your sense or urgency.

Both Poonam and I are working 18 hour days - 7 days a week and we need more people to join us in leadership positions to help.

Second- on this story- this is not the vA hospitals- this is the benefit exams for disability where they had in 2015 general doctors like Bruce and me doing traumatic brain evaluations- i stopped that when i got here- but this was purely about disability compensation and not healthcare

Your point on bad press and bad decisions is still very valid and we get the message loud and clear

Yesterday, Poonam, Marc, you and I had a conference call where I shared my very serious concerns about the disaster we are seeing at the VA hospitals and the terrible impact that it is having on our veterans.

After reading the below article my concerns have seriously heightened.

It is critical that we act now, without delay, to fix these issues. Our veterans are suffering every day. It is only a matter of time before the President sees or hears about the worsening abuse in the VA hospitals and how our veterans are still receiving sub-standard care, and loses his patience.

We need to act and we need to act right away before we have more situations like the one described in this article. Even though the incident in this article took place in 2015, the article was written recently on April 30, 2017 because these horrific issues are still occurring - and getting worse. The VA hospitals are just not handling our veterans medical care consistently and without repeated unacceptable failures.

The last thing we want is to let the President down for not reacting quickly and fixing what is so clearly broken. You have a top team of experts available and eager to help and support you. You have to step up and make tough decisions – we don't have a minute to waste.

SECVA Morning Report:
Independent Review Commission for Veterans Health Administration Facilities and Capital Assets

VHA Office of Policy and Planning

- Background and Purpose
- Recommendation
- Principles
- Lessons Learned
- Timeline
- Legislative Technical Assistance
- Communications

BACKGROUND AND PURPOSE

- In February, the VHA NLC recommended establishment of a VHA facilities review commission (similar to DOD's Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) Commission) as a top "big hairy audacious change", which stemmed in part from CARES Commission lessons learned, the Section 201 Independent Assessments (2014) and Commission on Care (2016) reports
- SECVA requested a recommended path forward for the review
- A tiger team was established – including Sr. Advisors to SECVA, OPP, OAEM, OCFM, OCAMES, OGC, OSI – to weigh the options:
 - Option 1 : a Statutory VA Advisory Commission ← recommended option
 - Option 2 : a Discretionary VA Advisory Committee
- The tiger team is now presenting its recommendation to SECVA, including
 - Suggested methodology/approach
 - Timeline
 - Legislative Technical Assistance
 - Communications strategy to accompany the initiative

RECOMMENDATION

- It is recommended by the tiger team that VA request Congress to pass legislation requiring VA to establish a Statutory VA Advisory Commission for the realignment of VHA facilities (i.e. Option 1)
- The recommendation for a Statutory VA Advisory Commission is based on the following rationale:
 - Recommendations from a Statutory VA Advisory Commission would have a higher likelihood of receiving an approval/disapproval vote from Congress on the entire recommendations package, since Congress required VA to establish the Commission
 - Congress could appropriate funds for the Commission, to include funds for staff and Contractors (if necessary); and
 - Congress could provide, by statute, that the Commission is FACA-exempt

PRINCIPLES IN DEVELOPING A NATIONAL REALIGNMENT PLAN

- Several principles will guide development of the national realignment plan and subsequent decisions by the Commission. Some include:
 - Balance the need for equal or better access, Veteran satisfaction, state-of-the-art world-class facilities, and cost-effectiveness
 - While addressing VA's health care mission, preserve VHA's other missions – education, research and emergency preparedness
 - The quality of VA and community care will be examined to ensure suitable facilities and well-trained health care professionals are available to meet the needs of Veterans
 - Assure a high performing clinically integrated network of VA care and community care, which may include adding sites of care where population and referral patterns indicate access needs to be improved
 - Leverage lessons learned from CARES Commission and DOD BRAC Commission

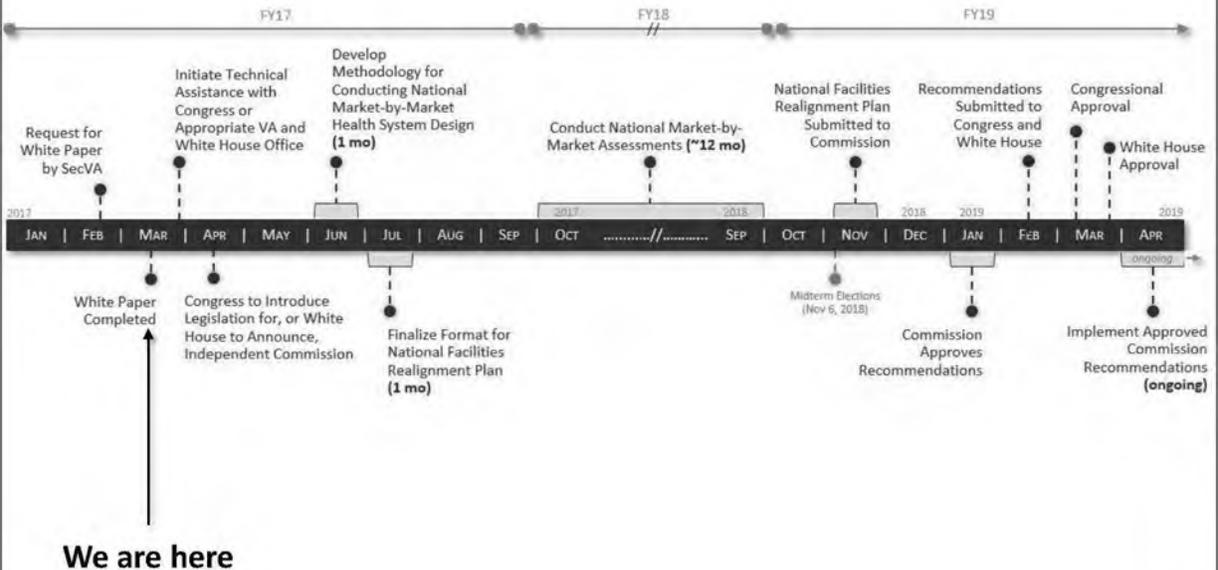

LESSONS LEARNED

- Some lessons learned from the CARES Commission and BRAC Commission process will be incorporated in the independent review and the National Realignment Plan that VA will submit to the Commission:
 - A number of CARES initiatives were never implemented because members of Congress and special interest groups blocked closure of facilities that the CARES Commission verified were no longer needed
 - Avoid adding requirements after implementation begins and fully account for IT requirements in initial estimates to prevent understating costs
 - In general, the Commission would not be able to add recommendation contingencies, but if contingencies are to be permitted, limit them to specific conditions
 - Requirements such as environmental clean-up before transfer or re-use and historical preservation hindered full implementation
 - BRAC analysis did not give a credible assessment of total excess capacity across DOD or the potential for achieving greater efficiencies in use of that capacity - this could be an issue with VHA as well
 - Not considering property transfer/disposal process once the BRAC closure process completed seemed to prolong moving of the liability, which slowed realizing cost savings

SUGGESTED TIMELINE

We are here

[DateTime]

VA DRAFT DOCUMENT – For Internal Use

LEGISLATIVE TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

- Establish a Statutory VA Advisory Commission comprised of members appointed by the WH and Congress with ex-officio expert members from VA facilities and VHA health care
- Offer legislative assistance on inclusion of review criteria based on access, quality, safety and community facility standards
- Congress has up or down vote on entire plan as a whole
- Criteria can be used for future decisions on capital by SECVA
- Empower the Commission to assess and approve VA/VHA's national realignment plan within 45 days of receipt of VHA's recommendations
- Insert language to preclude members of congress from blocking implementation in their districts

COMMUNICATIONS

- Need a focused and deliberate communications strategy to accompany the work of the Commission – before and during the assessments, and during implementation
- Communicate to Congress, the Commission, Veterans, VA employees, VSOs, Union partners, and other stakeholders
- Requires a comprehensive multi-media strategy
- Expand routine communications between the markets, VISNs and VHACO, to encourage joint resolution of common challenges, and sharing of best practices and lessons learned in managing mission changes
- Continually accentuate the benefits in terms of equal or greater access, quality, satisfaction, and economic benefits

The word is he was disliked by Secretary Munuchen and sent to the basement. He is not known to work well with people but I asked out team to keep an open mind and lets see if there is a fit.

I did not speak with Munuchen yet- i wanted to take one step At a time.

I read this today and thought it was excellent.

A few questions:

-Is this request coming from them?

I ask, because if I am to contact Tom, I need to tell him who this is for and from.

Per our conversation I have attached the proposed script for your review.

We would love your input and any changes that you think we should make prior to sharing with Tom Hanks.

It would mean a lot to us if we were able to get Tom Hanks to support this. It's such an important issue and his involvement would be a big win and really help our veterans.

Thank you.

Hi (b) (6)

Thanks again for your time yesterday---it was great catching up. As promised, attached is the creative treatment/script that I shared with you (1 version is simply the word document with script while the pdf integrates images). This work is the result of a few of the top minds at Batten & Company and BBDO who created this treatment after a deep review of the data and insights provided by the VA and other organizations in addition to personal interviews conducted with veterans.

We feel that this treatment, which could turn into a script for Tom Hanks or a different A-list talent, is moving, emotional and tells a story that demands attention and engagement from the general public. Our next step will be to develop a very clear call to action that will move a nation of citizens to action and veterans to the care and support they need. The Friday meeting with the VA that I mentioned yesterday has been postponed—but we will work closely with the VA during the rescheduled meeting to determine the appropriate CTA.

Please let us know any additional feedback or reactions you receive as you share this with Mr. Perlmutter, and other members of your team. We are excited to lock-down the appropriate talent for this campaign as we feel that he/she will be an integral part of developing the greater plan. As you and I discussed, an authentic advocate is a key element in inspiring action and a national movement!

Our CEO also received positive feedback from Secretary Shulkin after sharing this treatment and he is continuing to share with other VA leaders. I will also be sharing this with Facebook this week.

Thank you again for your continued partnership. I truly feel that together we can make a tremendous difference to our veterans!

Best,

THINK GREEN - SAVE PAPER - THINK BEFORE YOU PRINT!

In battle, when a soldier goes down, others go in.
To find him.
Stabilize him.
And bring him to safety.
That's the unwritten rule.
Leave no soldier behind.
When they come home, it's should be no different.
Because a lot of times, the enemy comes with them.
To haunt them. And hunt them.
Not with bullets. Or mortars. Or IED's.
But with things a soldier just can't shake.
Every day, over 20 American veterans commit suicide.
Because they've been left behind.
The fog is simply too dense.
The climb out too steep.
The pain too sharp.
And they can't find their way back.
So the battle is here now. At home.
We're all part of it.
We all need to honor the code.
Leave no soldier behind.
They fought for us.
Now we fight for them.

Subject: Update on Zero Veteran Suicide IMC Creative Treatment

Secretary Shulkin,
My team has been hard at work to progress the efforts of the Zero Veteran Suicide integrated marketing campaign. In the past few weeks, we've engaged the top minds at Batten & Company and BBDO (world renown creative and advertising agencies) to develop the creative treatment which you will find attached to this email.

The process in developing this treatment included a deep review of the data and insights provided by your organization in addition to personal interviews conducted with veterans. We feel that this treatment, which could turn into a script for Tom Hanks or a different A-list talent, is moving, emotional and tells a story that demands attention and engagement from the general public. Our next step will be to develop a very clear call to action that will move a nation of citizens to action and veterans to the care and support they need. Our teams will be meeting together next Friday to work through what the call-to-action will be.

We are continuing to engage with both Marvel and Facebook as they are integral partners in our overall success and amplification. Nailing down this piece of creative which must be powerful enough to move people emotionally is the critical first step in creating a campaign that breaks through. I look forward to your reaction and thoughts.

Best,

In battle, when a soldier goes down, others go in.
To find him.
Stabilize him.
And bring him to safety.
That's the unwritten rule.
Leave no soldier behind.
When they come home, it's should be no different.
Because a lot of times, the enemy comes with them.
To haunt them. And hunt them.
Not with bullets. Or mortars. Or IED's.
But with things a soldier just can't shake.
Every day, over 20 American veterans commit suicide.
Because they've been left behind.
The fog is simply too dense.
The climb out too steep.
The pain too sharp.
And they can't find their way back.
So the battle is here now. At home.
We're all part of it.
We all need to honor the code.
Leave no soldier behind.
They fought for us.
Now we fight for them.

The Arizona Republic has been uniformly critical of VA for the past three years (Pheonix is where the crisis began in 2014)

This is a turning point that they see things changing

VA prognosis improves

Three years ago, a crisis in VA health care erupted in Phoenix. Veterans were being forced to wait too long for VA care, putting their health and even lives at risk. • Sadly, some VA employees tried to hide the problems rather than solving them.

Our nation's promise to provide veterans access to the best care possible had been broken. • It shocked our national conscience and moved many, including Congress and the White House, to address the problem. While progress has been slow in some cases, we see some good things happening, including here in Phoenix. • Here are five things that make us optimistic:

1. A new, high-caliber VA chief

Our new VA secretary, Dr. David Shulkin, has been impressive in taking command, demonstrating his commitment to implement important reforms to address unresolved issues, seek out new innovations and build on progress from the previous administration.

Chief among his many challenges will be the need to expand and enhance the specialized quality care that VA offers veterans while balancing growing demand to allow veterans to seek care in the community when VA cannot provide care on a timely basis.

Meeting the challenges won't be easy. To succeed, Shulkin will need help from Congress and those of us who advocate for veterans.

2. Phoenix is piloting new services

We are seeing real progress under new Phoenix VA director Rima Ann Nelson. For example, our women veterans, the fastest growing segment of the VA patient population, can now receive same-day mammography results at the Phoenix VA.

In addition, Phoenix VA now offers tele-behavioral health services to veterans, which provides veterans the ability to receive the care they need from home when geography or other barriers prevent care in a timely manner.

And most recently, a pilot is being implemented for

JON GABRIEL

Confidence in beliefs allows you to appreciate diverse views

Seeking more ideological diversity, The New York Times opinion page hired center-right columnist Bret Stephens. Following his mild-mannered debut op-ed, the Gray Lady's readership went into revolt.

The Guardian labeled Stephens a "hippie puncher." Think Progress compared him to an Imperial Wizard of the KKK. Hashtag protests raged across social media, with subscribers showily canceling their subscriptions. Nearly 30,000 signed a petition demanding The Times fire the renegade thinker immediately.

What did the former Wall Street Journal deputy editor, Never Trumper and Pulitzer Prize-winning commentator do to stir such outrage? Endorse Assad's use of chemical weapons? Say slavery was no biggie? Praise the Boston Red Sox?

Stephens asked each reader to admit that they don't know everything.

After noting how Hillary Clinton campaign's utter certainty of a 2016 victory led to disaster, he mentioned another example of unquestioned secular dogma: climate change.

"Claiming total certainty about the science traduces the spirit of science," he wrote, adding, "censoriously asserting one's moral superiority and treating skeptics as imbeciles and deplorables wins few converts."

Stephens isn't even a so-called climate change "denier." He merely recommended that each of us be humble about the many unknowns, especially in the fast-changing world of science.

The mob shouted "heretic" and rustled up kindling for a Salem-style bonfire.

Science, let alone politics, are messy affairs. Throughout human history, we've debated, argued and fought over both until a majority settles upon an uneasy consensus. Then new data are gathered and we argue about them all over again.

I obviously have strong opinions, but I've had policy preferences that didn't work out and candidates who sorely disappointed. It shouldn't be controversial to assert that we all have a blind spot here or there.

The scandalized overreaction proved Stephens' point, that hubris and certainty can backfire in a big way. After all, his bosses at The Times must have been elated at all the traffic his piece generated.

I'm more of a skeptic than Stephens when it comes to apocalyptic environmental predictions. For that I blame my first-grade teacher. She handed us maps showing how the pollution-caused ice age would bury our Chicago suburb under a massive glacier. My mom, ever the pragmatist, assured me I wouldn't die since we were moving to Phoenix that summer.

After a childhood expecting to see polar bears chasing Cubs around Wrigley Field, in my late teens I was told to forget that ice age nonsense. The Ozone Hole would give all of us cancer.

RICHARD LUI/THE DESERT SUN

Bret Stephens' climate change views enraged readers who should be more open to such ideas.

Then imagine my 20-something shock to watch politicians trip over their aerosol empties to tell me global warming would chase me from Arizona, maybe back to that glacier-free Chicago suburb. Global warming gave way to the short-lived "global weirding" then to the endlessly malleable climate change. In the process, I lost the ability to panic. Throughout my life, the most extreme climate alarmists have been more wrong than right, at least after their more nuanced research was spun by politicians greedy for votes and dollars.

But with climate, like with everything else, I know that I might be wrong. That's why I continue to read the latest climate research and opinions from the other side of the partisan divide. If some opposing columnist is particularly excessive in his hyperbole, at least I'll get a laugh out of it and maybe sharpen my arguments.

Newspapers don't exist to confirm your biases but to inform and to challenge them. If you're confident in your beliefs, you should be secure enough to hear diverse views.

None of us, least of all yours truly, know everything there is to know. The only way to learn is to listen.

rural laboratory and radiology services. This pilot enables the Show Low Community-Based Outpatient Clinic (CBOC) to order basic laboratory and radiology services at the Summit Healthcare Regional Medical Center in Show Low on the same day of a CBOC appointment.

The pilot was spearheaded by the leadership of the Phoenix VA. It's expected to increase veteran satisfaction and reduce delays in care in Show Low.

3. Private sector is stepping in VA is creating more public-private partnerships to expand access to care and better serve veterans. VA recently announced that the Phoenix VA, TriWest Healthcare Alliance and CVS MinuteClinic are working together on a new initiative to expand access to health care services for Arizona veterans.

When necessary, veterans can be served the same day at MinuteClinic through the Veterans Choice Program to treat minor illnesses and injuries.

4. Greater and faster access

VA's private sector Choice program partner in Arizona and 28 states, TriWest Health Care Alliance, a Phoenix-based company, is greatly expanding access to care in the community for veterans.

TriWest now has more than 185,000 health-care providers and has helped 860,000 veterans receive more than 4.5

million medical appointments since the start of the Choice Program. Here in the Phoenix VA Medical Center's service area, there are 8,800 community providers who have scheduled care for 45,000 veterans for almost 100,000 routine and urgent appointments.

That is real progress to build upon.

5. Commitment to trim long waits

President Donald Trump signed into law an extension of the Veterans Choice program, which was set to expire in August. Continuing the Choice program will provide needed community care for potentially millions of veterans and prevent a repeat of the long wait times at VA hospitals.

Now, lawmakers can get to work with VA to create the next generation Choice

Program by this fall. We are cautiously optimistic that Choice 2.0, as Secretary Shulkin has called it, will build on the progress that has been made while preserving and bolstering the VA system of care.

Our veterans deserve the very best we can offer them. On key issues facing veterans, we are encouraged by what we see so far from the new administration and its local and national VA leaders.

But we have a long way to go. It is important that we find common ground and work together to honor the promises made to veterans when they signed up. We stand ready to do so.

Rick Romley is a former Maricopa County attorney and longtime advocate for veterans' issues. David J. McIntyre is president and CEO of TriWest Healthcare Alliance.

- There are going to be some of my friends coming who work at the VA in NJ- I hope they dont overwhelm you, and if they do, I will manage
- I think that its best that you keep a low profile and simply enjoy yourself- let me know if you feel otherwise, in which case I will introduce you formally as the Secretary
- No one really knows (except those that work at the VA) what I really do- they think I am just working on various projects and I go to DC often due to that. I prefer to keep my work life separate from all these folks- I like to be simply [(b) (6)] [(b) (6)] and spoilt wife who happens to travel for work, doing my own thing.

I really hope you, [(b) (6)] and [(b) (6)] enjoy themselves and dont feel out of place- didnt really call any of my non Indian friends. I am certain that you will have a blast, just hope [(b) (6)] and [(b) (6)] enjoy themselves too.

I spoke with the Secretary and Undersecretary of the VA about (b) (6) today. They agreed that it would be very beneficial for the Undersecretary to talk to (b) (6) about their mutual interests. I have copied the Undersecretary on this email. Would you mind introducing me and the her (Dr. Poonam Alaigh) to (b) (6) so the two of them could be in contact and have a conversation?

I appreciate your mentioning (b) (6) to me. The interests of (b) (6) and the VA are so closely aligned.

Thanks again

Also, somehow before Wednesdays hearing, you have to communicate to Ike and Laurie that you took their input and in the hearing you will mention about the service line quality model for each medical center as part of the new Choice program so that facilities like West Palm Beach should not be doing cardiac cath if the volume does not justify it- This was Laurie stated to us based on her fact finding conversation

VA Conference Call

AGENDA and CALL NOTES

Saturday May 6, 2017

- Status of crisis management initiative (ID existing and unexpected risks / field report cards)
 - The VA will institute upward feedback and other related programs
 - (b) (6) the Chief HR Officer from the Mayo Clinic has contacted Bruce to lend her expertise in the HR side
 - CNN is about to do a piece on Women's issues at the VA.
 - Poonam will bring in PR to do a Press Release on the VA's lowering the age for mammograms to age 40 and promote the other VA women's initiatives. Then, Fox will be given an exclusive. This is TIME SENSITIVE because it is a preemptive measure.
- Apple status (call and initiatives)
 - The NDA with Apple has been signed
 - (b) (6) is on point for the VA.
 - Bruce has arranged a call with the VA (Darin and Patty) on Monday May 8 to discuss the plan to move forward.
 - Two reps from each AMC has been assigned to participate and advise on this proposed effort with Apple
 - Then the AMC reps, Bruce and the VA will instigate a call with Apple within the week.
 - Bruce will integrate the VA Digital Service Team interim head, (b) (6) into the process.
 - The call will address two initiatives, transportable medical records and geotagging, but ultimately there are 5 or 6 initiatives with Apple in all
- CIO candidates and status
 - David has interviewed several candidates but has settled on (b) (6) from the Department of the Navy. David has spoken with SECNAV and he has agreed to detail (or transfer) Mr. Miller to the VA as CIO.
 - Melissa Glynn has withdrawn her name from consideration.
- Real Estate facilities initiative (Plan / David's discussions / Marc's discussions)
 - David and Poonam will send the PowerPoint proposed facilities plan to Marc
 - Marc will proceed to initiate and develop the "Congressional Plan" through Rep Roe and Senator Isakson.
 - Marc will contact Tom this weekend to set up a meeting with Isakson
 - Marc will call Rep Roe to set up a meeting with him
 - The facilities list will not be used for now

- EHR status
 - David is working toward a solution. Will keep us advised on progress
- PR / Crisis management
 - Marc has reached out to a restructuring PR Crisis management firm. They are talking internally on whether they can assist. Marc will report back when they respond.
 - The crisis firms of the AMC's will be a potential backup if this firm does not want to proceed.
- Undersecretary
 - David asked that we hold off on exploring this for another week
- DOD PTSD office
 - Marc was introduced to The Defense Centers of Excellence for Psychological Health and Traumatic Brain Injury (DCoE) and suggested a possible meeting between the VA and the DCoE to explore mutually beneficial issues and initiatives.
 - The DCoE provides the Military Health System with current and emerging psychological health and traumatic brain injury clinical and educational information. They identify gaps and prioritize needs in psychological health and TBI research, and then translate that research into clinical practice to improve patient outcomes. DCoE is a division of the Defense Health Agency Operations directorate. DHA is a joint, integrated combat support agency that supports the Military Health System
 - The mission of the DCoE is to improve the lives of our nation's service members, veterans and their families by advancing excellence in psychological health and traumatic brain injury prevention and care.
 - The DCoE's initiatives could be equally beneficial to the VA and may lead to an early detection program for the VA
 - Marc will contact his friend for an introduction of Dr. Alaiigh to Dr. (b) (6) its Director [DONE, May 6, 2017]
- Telemedicine
 - The Domestic Policy Council is giving the VA a hard time about this.
 - The EO drafted is taking a long time, so in the alternative
 - Seventeen governors have already agreed to allow telemedicine in their states. The VA will proceed to implement a telemedicine program in those 17 states. Timing was not discussed, so David and Poonam should provide the expected timing.
 - Once the 17 states are up and running, a PR announcement will be released promoting the progress of the VA, the lives that are being saved and the benefits of telemedicine, thanking the 17 governors for saving lives, with the hope that the PR shames the other states into following on.
 - If this does not get done in one week, we will go back to push the EO option

- Supply Chain initiative
 - The meeting that Bruce has planned at the Baltimore VA on May 15 will solve this issue as well as the issue of drug control, general digital inventory control and controlled substance control.
 - The cost will be $25,000 per VA site.
- The following additional items were discussed:
 - VA pays salary of Pres/VP of unions. POTUS may address this in the next contract negotiations
 - Mandatory Flu shots – Poonam will publicize this requirement for next Flu season.
 - Laurie reported on the visit she and Ike had with a VAMC director today
 - Employees worried about closings – VA will work on disseminating info to relieve this anxiety
 - Some medical centers are performing procedures that they are not best suited for and possibly cause repeated procedures. – VA HQ will ask employees to ID these types of issues.
 - Several employees are alleged to have committed crimes but are still employed due to a belief that no one can be fired.
 - Ike and Laurie will ask the employee if they can disclose this to David / Poonam and if the employee would discuss this with David and Poonam – If so, Poonam will make it clear that these types of employees can be terminated and they will deal with the fallout later.
 - It is expected that the Accountability bill that passed the House and is currently in the Senate will largely cure this.
 - P-Cards – The meeting Bruce is having on inventory will also cover standard practices on P-cards in the AMCs. Bruce will share this info with Marc since Marc has restructured P-card systems in major, large institutions.
