Veterans who are homeless or at imminent risk of homelessness are strongly encouraged to contact the National Call Center for Homeless Veterans at (877) 4AID-VET (877-424-3838) for assistance. To minimize the risk of contracting or spreading COVID-19, only Veterans who do not have access to a phone are to visit their closest VA medical center without calling in advance.

Message from Monica Diaz, Executive Director, VHA Homeless Programs Office

VHA's Homeless Programs Office (HPO) is proud to recognize two important observances this March: Women's History Month and Social Work Month.

Congress designated the month of March as Women's History Month in 1987. The observance commemorates the vital role of women in American history, and HPO is especially focused now on the achievements of women in the military. We honor women Veterans by providing supportive services, programs, and resources that are tailored to their specific and unique circumstances and needs. Many women Veterans face challenges when they return to civilian life, such as raising a family as single parents, or posttraumatic stress from exposure to combat or sexual assault. VA is committed to meeting women Veterans' needs through the delivery of programs such as: the Women Veterans Health Care Program, VA Mental Health for Women Veterans, the Center for Women Veterans, Supportive Services for Veteran Families Program, and many more. Learn more about these resources here.

In this newsletter, you'll find an interview with Eileen F. Devine, national coordinator for the Health Care for Homeless Veterans Program, who discusses her role leading a critical HPO program. You'll also find an original story about Emma Miller, VHA's first woman employee. We hope you'll find the stories of these groundbreaking women as inspirational as we do. We're honored to serve women Veterans, and all Veterans, each and every day.

HPO also extends its deepest gratitude to social workers this month. The theme of this year's Social Work Month is "Social Workers Are Essential," and we could not agree more wholeheartedly. HPO's work to eliminate homelessness among Veterans would not be possible without social workers. VA is one of the largest employers of social workers in America, and these valued employees are critical to HPO's work. Social workers help with outreach to Veterans experiencing homelessness, consult on housing and community living options, help Veterans and support networks with long-term planning, and assist with accessing financial benefits and resources. You can learn more about VA social workers here. Thank you!

How women Veterans can get help addressing their needs through VA programs

U.S. Army Veteran Loretta White didn't know she was eligible for VA benefits when she left the military in 1989 because of a domestic violence situation.

Believe it or not, many women Veterans do not self-identify as Veterans. According to Dr. Laura Miller, psychiatrist and medical director of reproductive mental health for VHA, this is due in part to the misconception that if you did not engage in combat, you are not considered a Veteran.

Special Feature: Emma Miller – VHA's First Female Employee – Forged a Path for Today's Women Leading HPO Programs

For Women's History Month, the Homeless Programs Office remembers Emma Miller. When she became the first employee of the National Asylum for Disabled Veterans, the first iteration of the Veterans Health Administration, the precedent was set for commissioning women to perform the important work they had done as volunteers in times of war. Mrs. Miller's dedicated service to Veterans paved the way for the women across VHA and the Homeless Programs Office who are leading programs critical to VA's mission to prevent and end homelessness for Veterans and their families.

Social Workers are Essential to Ending Veteran Homelessness

Social workers supporting VHA homeless programs and services are often Veterans' first connection point for help with exiting or avoiding homelessness. The 2021 National Social Work Theme is "Social workers are Essential." This theme was selected to inform the public about the past and present role of social workers in helping the most vulnerable people in society.

HPO Staff Spotlight: Eileen Devine

From conducting outreach on the street, to helping Veterans navigate the VHA's systems, to leading programs that provide Veterans with the services and resources they need, social workers play a vital role in helping Veterans exit homelessness. In this month's issue of the newsletter, we interview Health Care for Homeless Veterans' (HCHV) National Director Eileen Devine, a licensed clinical social worker who has worked for VA since 2003. In this Q&A, Eileen shares how social workers' training and skills help Veterans exit homelessness, how her background has helped her lead a national program dedicated to helping Veterans, and what led her to this work.
