

Mary "Heather" Levy, BSN, RN, is a Cancer Care Nurse Navigator at the Ralph H. Johnson VA Medical Center. She graduated from The Medical University of South Carolina and has been a nurse for over 30 years, with 21 of those working with ENT patients. For the past 4 years, Heather has specifically focused on head and neck cancer care. Originally from Baton Rouge, Louisiana, she's called Charleston home for the past 34 years.

Heather was born in the Norfolk Naval Hospital, while her father, a Vietnam War Veteran, was serving overseas. She developed a deep understanding of the sacrifices made by Veterans and their families, which instilled in her a sense of duty and dedication to serving those who have served their country. Throughout her career, she has been committed to providing care to Veterans, recognizing the importance of caring for our Nation's Heroes.

As an ENT Cancer Care Nurse Navigator, Heather's role is guiding patients through their cancer journey, providing support, education, and advocacy every step of the way.
