GOOD NEWS STORIES

1) COVID-19 cases that return after antiviral treatment puzzle doctors
VA neurologist Dr. Michael Charness had a 71-year-old patient with symptoms of COVID-19. The patient started taking antiviral medication Paxlovid. By day 2, his symptoms were almost completely gone; by day 7 he was testing negative. But on day 9 the symptoms returned, and he tested positive again. “At the moment, I would say it’s just a little mysterious,” Charness said, “it has to be much better studied.”

2) Local VA patient advocates help Veterans navigate system
If you’re a Veteran not getting the care you need from VA, have you spoken to your patient advocate? It’s one of the least-known positions in VA health care, but it’s also one of the most valuable. “It’s just pointing them towards what the veteran needs,” said Martin Longoria, patient advocate at the Corpus Christi VA. His job is to fight for Veterans and their families.

3) Video tablets are lowering suicides, raising treatment for rural Veterans
Over the past couple years, a computer tablet has become an indispensable ally to Air Force Veteran Andrew Labadie. From his home in rural Branch County just north of the Indiana border, Labadie can tap into a web of mental health specialists: counselors, psychologists, recreational therapists. “We’ve had a lot of positive feedback from Veterans,” said social worker Russell Bell at the Battle Creek VA.

4) New Jersey VA event looks to encourage survivors of military sexual assault to seek help
VA is encouraging survivors of military sexual assault to seek help. April is Sexual Assault Awareness month, and the East Orange, NJ VA rounded out the month with an event called An Evening of Self-Care. “We believe you and we believe in you,” says Xiomara Johnson of VA New Jersey.
