Marthe Moseley

Marthe Moseley is associate director, clinical practice, at the Veterans Health Administration Office of Nursing Services (ONS) in Washington. Marthe has made seminal contributions to critical care and acute nursing by 1) using evidence to create practice protocols that have informed veteran, military and civilian nursing practice worldwide; 2) conducting innovative research; 3) improving clinical patient outcomes; 4) publishing journal articles, a leading critical care nursing textbook and book chapters; 5) leading the nation's nursing agenda for care of veterans; and 6) teaching clinicians. She helps lead the ONS clinical practice program with seven field advisory committees and three work groups to ensure the dissemination of evidence-based products. She also led the Cardiovascular Field Advisory Committee in the research and evaluation of the placement of EKG leads; this work has influenced practice and patient-centered care across the country.
